Volcano blows stack again

Fallout funnels through Interior

Times News Services

VANCOUVER, Wash. — A new crater, glowing red, was spotted today on Mount St. Helens following a spectacular series of eruptions that hurled ash nearly 18 kilometres into the air and sent it drifting into Canada.

The eruptions ended a six-week lull in the volcanic activity. And residents of the Interior communities of Fernie, Sparwood, Cranbrook, Salmo and Creston were among the B.C. residents awakening this morning to find their yards dusted lightly with grey-white ash, which also affected cut hay crops in the Fernie district.

At Fernie, which was hot and muggy and where winds were whipping the ash around, motorists were advised to use their headlights.

Ash also reduced visibility sharply this morning in the southern foothills region of Alberta, as the plume swooped down from the Rockies and began to swing northeast to the Saskatoon district of Sackatchewan.

Also in the news today was Mt. Gorely, a dormant Soviet volcano 64 kilometres from the city of Petropavlovsk on the Kamchatka Peninsula, that erupted in a three-kilometre-high tower of ash and gasses.

The news agency Tass reported the blast in the sparsely populated region destroyed a lake that had formed in its crater. No injuries were reported.

While fallout from the Tuesday's St. Helens blasts was not expected to bother coastal B.C. immediately, Vancouver city council Tuesday approved an emergency program for dealing with it. This included procedures to protect city facilities, including computer rooms, cooling towers and air conditioning units in city hall, the public safety building and the fire department.

Subsidy cut hits Yarrows

The federal government decision to cut shipbuilding subsidies to nine per cent from 20 per cent will cost Victoria 300 jobs within six months, local Burrard Yarrows Corporation manager Don Challinor said today.

He said the Esquimalt yard has no major projects after the new ferry is completed in April for the provincial government.

The current work force is 720 but about 300 would have to be let go by year's end unless Ottawa changes its mind.

Protests have been sent to Senator Ray Perrault. The shipyard has also sought the help of the B.C. government.

Challinor said the action hurts B.C. yards more than its competitors in Quebec because the eastern yards have a heavy backlog of orders and will be busy for many months.

They will not have to bid on many projects this year and they will not be greatly affected by the new subsidy levels.

But the action is devastating for B.C. yards, Challinor said.

Of B.C.'s 2,800 shipyard workers, about 1,000 could be laid off by year's end.

"That's how serious it is."

Challinor said the Canadian yards must be subsidized because labor rates are higher here than in competing countries.

Building trades strike averted, but price high

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators for B.C. construction workers and contractors averted a province-wide shutdown with a tentative agreement Tuesday that a contractors' spokesman said employers cannot afford.

Roy Gautier of the 17-union B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council said the proposed two-year contract, which provides increases in wages and benefits of $3.35 an hour, is the best in the country. Gautier said the council will recommend its members accept it.

But Chuck McVeigh, president of the Construction Labor Relations Association, expressed misgivings about the deal.

"That's the price we had to pay for labor peace," he said. "The only alternative was a lengthy strike that would have cost this province millions of dollars."

The contract provides for a 22-per-cent increase over two years with 10.3 per cent or $1.55 coming in the first year, said Gautier. Wages are retroactive to May of this year.

Construction wages at present average $15.07 an hour.

Both Gautier and McVeigh agreed that the trade council's withdrawal of its demand for an affiliation clause was crucial to the settlement. The clause would have allowed all tradesmen to shut down a construction project over the presence of unions not affiliated with the building trades.

In addition to the wage and benefits package, the contract provides for a geographical (or multi-employer) certification clause.

Gautier said the clause gets around Section 40 of the code, which says that a building trades union has the right to represent all workers in a given geographical area or project site provided it can prove that it represents the majority of workers, and if it has the backing of the majority of contractors involved.

With the new settlement, that voluntary support from association contractors will become obligatory.

Gautier said the unions also won a reservation clause allowing unionized construction workers to withdraw their labor in order to aid a different union involved in a dispute at the same project.

McVeigh said the agreement gives workers the highest wages in Canada, a situation he blamed on the industry-wide bargaining system that has been in effect in B.C. since February, 1978, when the B.C. Labor Relations Board ordered the 17 construction unions into a single bargaining unit.

Gautier rejected McVeigh's statement that the settlement was too expensive for the provincial economy.

"The contract reflects the climate in the industry at the present time," he said. "When there's work around the contractors do well and we feel we're entitled to our piece of the pie."

McVeigh said both sides will take the contract to their members today.

Sellers slipping

LONDON (UPI) — Film star Peter Sellers is in "very grave" condition and losing ground in his fight for life, a hospital bulletin said today.

Sellers, 54, who suffered a massive heart attack and then cardiac arrest Tuesday is in the intensive care unit of Middlesex Hospital where doctors earlier today said he was "critically ill."

But in their third bulletin of the day, the hospital said "there has been a deterioration in his condition which is now very grave."

Sellers' fourth wife, actress Lynne Frederick, arrived from Los Angeles today and his second wife, Britt Ekland, flew from Stockholm with their daughter, Victoria, 15.

Jan. 1 B.C. denticare plan just for young, aged, poor

B.C. will begin an $85-million dental care insurance program Jan. 1, Health Minister Rafe Mair announced today.

The program is primarily intended to help children, senior citizens and the poor, he said.

"The Dental Care Plan will cover nearly 915,000 people when it begins, including 415,000 children and 290,000 senior citizens," Mair said.

The minister unveiled the plan in a joint announcement with the College of Dental Surgeons of B.C.

The plan will pay up to $700 a person annually for basic dental services available from general practice dentists, and for dentures. Mair said there will be no premiums or deductibility.

Four groups are eligible:

— Those whose Medical Services Plan premiums are paid by the ministry of human resources, and their dependents. The plan will cover 100 per cent of insured services.

— Those who receive premium assistance from the Medical Services Plan, including senior citizens receiving premium assistance, and dependents. Again, the plan will cover 100 per cent of insured services.

— For all other senior citizens, 65 and over, the plan will cover 50 per cent of insured services to the annual maximum of $700.

— Children 14 and under not covered in other categories will have 100 per cent coverage for a once-yearly preventive care package, consisting of an oral check-up, cleaning, scaling and fluoride treatment. The plan will cover 50 per cent of other insured services.

Eligible persons registered with the Medical Services Plan will automatically be covered. Other persons will have to apply for coverage.

A booklet detailing benefits will be available to the public before the plan's introduction, and a media advertising campaign is planned, Mair said.

He said dentists will be paid under the plan on a fee schedule negotiated with the College of Dental Surgeons of B.C.

Participating dentists will bill the plan directly on behalf of the patient, who will receive a copy of the submitted claim.

Patients of non-participating dentists will have to pay the dentist directly, then submit a claim for reimbursement.

The dental college hailed the program as a positive step forward in dental care.

"We're especially pleased that the plan is aimed at helping those who need it most — children, senior citizens and the disadvantaged," said president Dr. Ted Ramage.

Reward : £1,000 for a good job

LONDON (CP) — Unemployment has hit a 44-year high in Britain and Andrew Leslau has given job hunting an extensive new twist.

Leslau, 23, who recently graduated in Russian studies from Essex University, is offering £1,000, about $2,750, to anyone who will give him a job.

He made the offer by placing a classified ad in The Times, which set him back £62.

The ad in Tuesday's paper reads: "Special offer £1,000 of my own savings in return for most interesting job opportunity.

"I am a bright new male graduate, travelled, articulate, serious, industrious, career minded. I want to move with the times."

Lesau is not the only one who is hard up for work in Britain.

Figures released by the government Tuesday showed that the jobless total stands at 1,896,634, the highest level since 1936.

That's an increase of 236,958 over last month's figures and school leavers account for almost half that increase. (For complete story on unemployment see page 52).

New phoney letter

Another phoney letter has appeared on the B.C. political scene — this one bearing the forged signature of Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe and warning of a fall election.

"There may be a fall election so please register for canvassing now," says the handwritten postscript on what appears to be a recent Vancouver-Little Mountain Social Credit constituency letter.

But Wolfe said Tuesday neither the signature nor the writing is his.

"There's obviously just somebody playing games," he said. "I'm assured by our executive and by the head of our canvassing people, that none of the members who were involved in this wrote on the letter or anything. It's not my writing."

Snakes alive! This is a . . . a holdup

CHICAGO (AP) — A bandit awakened a man in an apartment, pointed a snake at him and took $6 before fleeing on a bicycle, police said.

Antonio Zavala, 28, told police the snake looked like a boa constrictor and was two metres long.

Policeman Arthur Nielsen said Tuesday that Zavala chased the robber, "but he didn't really want to catch him because he wouldn't know what to do if he did."

A 15-year-old boy had been seen in the area carrying a snake. Police found the snake curled up in a box under a stairwell, but they didn't find the youth.

Mail thefts cost banks $2M a year

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's 11 chartered banks lose more than $2 million a year in mail thefts and the banking industry wants better protection from the Post Office.

In a brief presented Tuesday to a federal inquiry into postal security, the Canadian Bankers' Association said the Post Office isn't serious enough about looking after its mail.

"(Its) Security and Investigation Branch is relatively ineffective in preventing and uncovering mail-related crime," it said.

The bankers said that special packets they use to send cash and jewels to and from remote branches are hot items to mail robbers and thieves have taken packets valued at about $3 million during the past five years.

Banks also have trouble getting new credit cards out to users without having many waylaid. Losses on stolen cards average $1,600 per card, the brief said, although total losses have decreased since 1975 after "a great deal of effort and additional cost to the banks."

Cheque fraud also "accounts for losses of several millions of dollars each year," the bankers said, and "the majority of cheque frauds are mail-related."

For example, nearly 12,000 federal government cheques worth $10.6 million were stolen from the mail and illegally cashed between 1975-79.

The brief noted most of the direct loss in cheque thefts is absorbed by retail outlets which cash the cheques.

"We do not imply that cheque theft is largely perpetrated by postal employees," said the brief.

But the Post Office plays a vital role as "an important link in the payment system of our country." One in three envelopes in the system contains a cheque or other instrument of payment, says the brief.

"As such, (the Post Office) should assume full responsibility for developing a service which is secure and reliable in every respect."

The bankers association recommended that the maximum liability of $100 that the Post Office assumes for registered mail and money packet service be increased, and that a higher security priority be accorded for first class service.

The Post Office's 75 security personnel in Canada should be given better training and more powers, and "be re-organized along the lines of the U.S. Postal Inspection Service, with powers of arrest and prosecution."

The bankers association also called for tougher sentences for convicted mail robbers.

Forced retirement halt foreseen

TORONTO (CP) — Compulsory retirement at age 65 will soon be a thing of the past, a management consultant told the first global conference on the future Tuesday. (For more on conference see page 56).

Ed Starr of the Toronto firm of Woods Gordon said: "With inflation eroding retirement incomes and pressure from human rights groups, it is inevitable that legislators will eliminate compulsory retirement at age 65."

This will have an enormous impact on business and industry as older employees compete for senior executive positions with the baby boom generation of workers in their 30s and 40s, Starr said.

"The result will be increased middle management unrest, growth in white collar unionization and a greater number of executives entering the job market."

In the next 20 years, the number of people in Canada aged 65 or over will increase by almost one million, while those aged 19 or less will decline by about 250,000, Starr said.

About 12 per cent of Canada's estimated population by the year 2000 of 28 million will be aged 65 or over, compared with nine per cent of 24 million now.

Starr said the increasing age of the population will create dramatic growth in industries such as health care. Statistics Canada has projected that demand for health care facilities by people over 65 will triple in the next 50 years to 55 million patient-days a year from the present 16 million.

Other demographic movements will include a continuing westward shift in Canada's population and a greater concentration in cities, Starr said.

By 1991, 85 per cent of Canadians will be living in urban areas, compared with 75 per cent today. More than half of Canada's people will be living in Metropolitan Toronto, Vancouver and Montreal by the end of this decade.

Robert Shoniker, senior partner of the Management Resource Group of Toronto, said the most important forces in the marketplace over the next decade will be the maturation of the baby boom and the "echo" of that boom as its members have children; the partnership family with both husband and wife working; the beginning of an energy-conscious lifestyle and the trend to a conserver-oriented society.

Keith Guelpa of Management Resources said businessmen pay too little attention to demographic trends and that market projections based on the past or present will be inadequate to meet future competition.

Bomb blast on Tehran street

The Associated Press

Several bombs exploded today in a bustling shopping district in downtown Tehran, killing six persons and injuring almost 100 others, Tehran Radio reported.

And in the U.S., police and FBI agents are hunting for the assassins of a former aide to the deposed shah of Iran.

At least one of the bombs in Tehran exploded on Ferdowsi Avenue, a main street in the centre of city, near the Turkish embassy and the West German consulate, the radio said.

Ferdowsi Avenue, one of the busiest streets in the capital, is lined with shops selling carpets, antiques and other items. A number of embassies are also located there.

The bombs began exploding about 9:30 a.m. at a time when the street usually is crowded with shoppers.

The state radio quoted a revolutionary committee spokesman as saying authorities have "clues" to the identities of the bombers. He did not elaborate.

In the Washington, D.C., suburb of Bethesda, Md., Ali Akbar Tabatabai, a critic of Iran's revolutionary government, was gunned down shortly after noon Tuesday as he answered the door at his expensive home, officials said.

Tabatabai, 49, was shot several times in the stomach by a man dressed as a U.S. Postal Service employee, who had rung the bell.

At the time of the slaying, two men were holding a kidnapped mailman whose delivery truck was used to carry the gunman to the victim's home, authorities said.

One FBI agent, speaking of the hunt for the killers, said: "It's going to be a long haul."

Officials declined to speculate on a motive for the slaying, which came less than a week after two persons were killed in an attempt to kill former Iranian prime minister Shahpour Bakhtiar in Paris.

Meanwhile, Iran's official Pars news agency said 10 more drug traffickers were executed today on orders of the regime's special anti-narcotics court, headed by Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali. The state radio also reported the executions of four Iraqi "saboteurs" in oil-rich Khuzestan province.

On Tuesday, Iran reported new Iraqi border attacks. Iraqi gunners scored a direct hit on an oil well at Naft-Shahr, setting off a fire that raged for hours.

It said a land mine planted in the same area by Iraqi mercenaries blew up under a bus, killing five Iranians and wounding 15.

Several border villages also came under Iraqi artillery fire, and Iranian forces returned the fire, inflicting "heavy casualties" on the Iraqis, Tehran radio said.

Map valid noon Thursday

A cold front which moved through the province yesterday has left a cooler airmass in its wake. A weak ridge of high pressure across southern B.C. today will maintain generally sunny skies although south coastal regions will have some low clouds moving in from the Pacific in the morning. The north coast will remain cloudy with some showers as other disturbances moving in from the west enter B.C. in that area. Mainly cloudy skies with some shower activity will spread into central B.C. this afternoon in advance of these disturbances.

Red tape threat to safety

QUEBEC (CP) — An air traffic controller says administrative stupidity and red tape could lead to an air "catastrophe" over Montreal or another Canadian city.

Paul Bibeau, head of the Montreal safety committee of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, told the federal inquiry into aviation safety today that radar breakdowns and financial cutbacks are reducing the effectiveness of air traffic control.

He added that construction of a Canadair aircraft assembly plant at Montreal's Dorval International Airport is affecting the quality of radar reception.

"Controllers have already warned authorities of this fact but no measure has yet been taken to move the (radar) antenna," he said. "Perhaps we have to await difficulties and put the safety of the travelling public in danger before something moves."

Early tuna, no agreement, fish war with U.S. possible

OTTAWA (CP) — A new fish war between Canada and the United States could erupt if albacore tuna moving north into West Coast waters arrive before negotiators deliver a bilateral fishing agreement, a fisheries committee was told Tuesday.

Former environment minister John Fraser warned that unless an agreement is reached before the tuna arrive in large numbers, a major confrontation is likely if Canadian authorities start arresting American fishermen.

"It is unbelievable that the government has waited this long before acting," said Fraser, Conservative MP for Vancouver South. "This could go far beyond the tuna fishery."

The Commons fisheries committee was told by fisheries department officials that a few tuna have already been spotted off British Columbia and large schools are expected in about 10 days.

Last year, 19 American fishermen were arrested when they followed the tuna into Canada's 320-kilometre zone. Their cases are still before the courts.

At that time, the U.S. insisted its fishermen had the right to fish tuna anywhere while Canada argued that its federal laws prohibited them from entering Canadian waters.

Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc told the Commons earlier Tuesday that Canadian and American officials would soon start preliminary negotiations and agreement is likely.

Conservative MP Tom Siddon from the B.C. riding of Richmond-South Delta said he understands the U.S. has proposed a reciprocal agreement giving Canadian fishermen access to tuna in American West Coast waters in return for American rights off Canada's West Coast.

Ron McCloud, director-general of the fisheries department in B.C., told the committee "there is some need for urgency" to get agreement because the tuna are arriving ahead of schedule.

The fish follow masses of warm water which are moving north faster than expected by department scientists.

LeBlanc told the House the government is interested in a reciprocal agreement but he would not disclose Canadian conditions.

The Americans say they are unhappy with Canada's leisurely approach to the tuna negotiations.

Fraser urges Kemano hearings

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government should conduct a rigorous environmental assessment of the $2.5-billion hydroelectric project in northern British Columbia proposed by the Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd. (Alcan), former environment minister John Fraser said Tuesday.

Fraser told the Commons fisheries committee that Alcan's "rape of interior B.C." demanded public hearings into the project, something the former Progressive Conservative government had promised to do.

Fraser, MP for Vancouver South, also said the fisheries department should be making public the potential dangers of two proposed dams to the B.C. fishing and tourism industries to counter Alcan's attempts to "soften up the public" through public relations exercises in nearby communities.

West Coast environmentalists say new diversions of water in the area threaten rivers in which salmon and rainbow trout spawn.

The company wants to triple its aluminum smelting capacity at nearby Kitimat by adding one or two new smelters. They would be supplied with electricity from the new watershed in the Kemano area.

Fraser tried to get fisheries department officials to explain what they were doing to pressure the environment department to initiate hearings but he only received assurances that Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc was concerned about Alcan's proposal.

b.c. briefs

Sinclair out after operation

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — James Sinclair, former Liberal fisheries minister and father of Prime Minister Trudeau's estranged wife Margaret, has been released from hospital.

The 72-year-old retired industrialist entered hospital earlier this month for a minor operation.

Fires dying but rain needed

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Only 54 forest fires were reported burning in the province Tuesday, but the B.C. forest service said Prince George district forests have not soaked up enough moisture to be considered safe.

Duty officer Jim Haley said while only 14 fires were still burning in the Prince George district, forests are extremely dry.

"It would take less than a week of dry weather and the forests would be in danger again," Haley said.

A record $6.6 million has been spent fighting fires in the district, which includes the area from the Yukon to McBride and Valemount and from the Alberta border to Endako.

Driver charged with murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver man was charged Tuesday with attempted murder after a fireman was run over by a car twice.

Police said the fireman spoke to a car driver whose vehicle was blocking the driveway to a fire hall on Monday and the car driver then rammed the truck, knocking off a door and hitting the fireman.

The driver left, then sped back and again ran over the fireman, who was lying on the road.

Yui Man Cheng, 38, also is charged with criminal negligence causing bodily harm and leaving the scene of an accident.

CN suing tugboat owners

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian National Railways on Tuesday launched another legal action arising from damage to a railway bridge when it was hit by a freighter in the city harbor last October.

CN already is suing the owners of the Japan Erica, which knocked over the Second Narrows rail bridge last October in dense fog. The railway now is suing the owners of two tugboats charged with guiding the vessel through Burrard Inlet that night.

In its B.C. Supreme Court writ, CN charges C. H. Cates Ltd. of Vancouver with negligence and breach of duty on 18 different grounds — including assisting the freighter's passage in obviously hazardous conditions, failure to properly use radar equipment, giving poor advice to the captain and crew, and failing to halt the freighter when collision became imminent.

CN has estimated its total damages at more than $25 million.

Chretien promises prostitution law

VANCOUVER (CP) — Justice Minister Jean Chretien has promised amendments to the Criminal Code to help police combat prostitution.

The amendments will include "a new definition of soliciting that will permit the law-enforcement officers of every province to . . . clean the streets, because it's kind of embarrassing in the present situation," Chretien said Tuesday.

His statement followed a meeting with B.C. Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy and Attorney-General Allan Williams.

Chretien, here for constitutional talks, said the federal prostitution bill, to be introduced this fall, "would permit the prosecutors to make sure the people who solicit — offering sex for money or asking for sex for money — would be guilty of an offence."

"I think that innocent citizens should be able to walk through the streets of the city," he added.

Under current law, as interpreted in a 1978 Supreme Court of Canada ruling, a prostitute must be "pressing or persistent" in approaching a prospective client to be convicted of soliciting.

Bring a parachute

The Dubin commission on aviation safety is rivalling the MacDonald commission on the RCMP for shocking revelations.

What makes the testimony given to the Dubin commission all the more startling, however, is that the laws governing air transportation have been openly, not secretly, broken for years.

The latest outrage, detailed this week when the one-man commission convened in Quebec City, is another footnote to a long tale of inadequate enforcement by Transport Canada, the federal agency responsible for air safety.

A commission investigator found that a small Quebec airline operating scheduled routes between Baie Comeau, Rimouski, Matane and Mont-Joli was in constant and flagrant violation of the most basic air regulations. Improperly trained pilots, incomplete logs, defective aircraft, overloaded aircraft, all added up to 151 pages of violations.

How, you might ask, does any outfit that flies with holes in the aircraft and shuts the passenger door with seat belts manage to keep its licence? Evidence given at previous commission hearings across the country has pointed to possible answers.

Mr. Justice Charles Dubin of the Ontario Court of Appeal has been told by Transport Canada employees that breaches in regulations were being ignored by the top management of the ministry. "Information that could help prevent accidents is passed up the line to the supervisory and management level. That's where it is breaking down."

One employee said that accidents could have been foreseen and prevented if Transport Canada would learn from past mistakes, communicate what it learns and enforce existing regulations.

The commission has also been told that a section of the guidelines for inspectors that was supposed to be revoked in 1977 is still in effect. The paragraph in question states that when an inspector is contemplating suspending the operating licence of an airline, no action may be taken until "you fully consider the possibility of embarrassment to the minister and other political implications which may result from suspension action."

A recently retired RCMP officer in the force's air division said that attempts are made to enforce airworthiness standards but that "the commercial operator is immediately on the phone to his member of parliament . . . the Department of Transport then withdraws."

Is it any surprise then that a B.C. operator, who had his licence suspended for two years after carrying on an illegal operation for three years, committed constant infractions of safety laws, was granted a licence to operate a commercial airline a year later.

Mr. Justice Dubin is being told that some small airline operators are willing to risk the lives of their customers for what is presumed to be a profit motive. They will take as many liberties with the regulations as they can.

He is also being told that the very agency that designed air safety regulations for some reason, possibly political, lacks the motivation to uphold the safeguards.

Surely guilty air carriers and Transport Canada officials need not wait for the Dubin Commission recommendations to begin making the necessary changes to ensure that the travelling public are getting the service and protection they are entitled by law.

Towing in parks

It is ironic. On the one hand, the City of Victoria is preparing a bylaw to regulate strictly the towing of cars from private lots. On the other hand, it is enforcing towaways from the city-owned parking lot at Thetis Lake Park.

Some justification, even if dubious, exists for towaways from downtown lots: to protect persons who buy parking space on a monthly basis, to ensure turnover in parking lots, to discourage commuters from bringing cars downtown.

None of those conditions exists at Thetis Lake Park. If the city is determined to collect 50 cents from everyone visiting the park, why not simply issue parking tickets to the offenders.

A fine response

With all of the gloomy news confronting us each day, it is gratifying to be able to report that this community is still capable of responding to human situations with love, compassion and generosity.

One of our young patients, a 13-year-old girl, has suffered since birth from a rare muscle disease. As one of the results of this disease, her spine twisted to the extent that it was threatening her ability to breathe.

Despite her handicap which necessitated use of a specially constructed wheelchair, this young lady managed to attend school and never lost interest in the world around her. She has attended this centre regularly for therapy treatments over the past 11 years.

Recently, after a lot of thought and discussion with her family, it was agreed that she would undergo surgery in St. Paul, Minn., where an internationally-renowned surgery team would afford the best chances of success.

Considerable risk was involved, but we're happy to report that the operation was successful, and while she still must use a wheelchair, she will be able to live a fuller life than previously.

As most of us know, medical and health insurances in the U.S.A. are rudimentary, to say the least. In addition to coverage provided through our own B.C. health plans, a very substantial additional sum of money was required to make all of this possible.

Our young friend has lots of friends, and soon spread word of the decision to operate.

Without fanfare, literally hundreds of people have contributed toward meeting these costs. The airlines were wonderful in making special arrangements. Service clubs held a variety of fund-raising events. It was truly a magnificant and gratuitous community response.

The little girl has written the following letter which she hopes will be read by everyone who participated in helping her to help herself:

"Thanks for the new lease on life. Since hundreds of people, some known but may unknown to me, deserve a very special thanks, I thought this was the best way of reaching all.

"Thanks to your generosity and prayers I have been home from St. Paul, Minnesota for two weeks now and getting better fast after major spinal surgery. The operation was done on June 3 and was a great success, thanks to terrific doctors and nurses. I now have a future ahead of me, and am able to sit up in my electric wheelchair, get to school and get the education I need. Of course it's not all school, I do get to the movies, shopping, and 'outings' with my friends.

"My parents and I would like all to known how deeply greatful we are for all your kindness and prayers and also for generosity toward the special fund at G. R. Pearkes Centre for Children which made my surgery and new lease on life possible. Lots of love and thanks, Lisa."

Her experiences may be of benefit to other children with similar handicap. Incidentally, anyone who still wishes to contribute can make a donation to the "Lisa Fund in trust," c/o Pearkes Centre, 3970 Haro Rd., Victoria, B.C. V8N 4A9. — Deryck Thomson, Executive Director, G. R. Pearkes Centre for Children.

Election jigsaw puzzle pieces fall together

The pieces are falling into place as neatly as a fret-sawed jigsaw puzzle. There are no loose edges. If everything continues to go according to plan, the final picture will be one of a provincial election in either the fall of 1980 or the spring of 1981.

It seems improbable, perhaps. The Social Credit government did, after all, obtain a new mandate just 15 months ago. Bill Bennett and his cabinet need not face the people for another three years.

True enough, but the government has a number of good reasons to prefer an election sooner rather than later. Consider:

1. The difficulty the government now has in functioning during the legislative session. Its margin of four seats, reduced to three by the illness of Speaker Harvey Schroeder, is much too narrow to be comfortable. Cabinet ministers must be in the legislative precinct every afternoon; trips around the province, let alone out of province, are virtually impossible.

Long session

The legislative session shows no signs of ending. A couple of major bills remain to be introduced; half a dozen more sit on the order paper. The spending estimates of more than a dozen ministers remain to be passed. It is certain to be past Labor Day, and may well be Hallowe'en, before the cabinet can begin functioning normally again.

The government lives under the constant threat that a bad epidemic of influenza could lead to its downfall. A number of government ministers undoubtedly think it is better to try for a new mandate soon than to try to struggle on like this for another three years.

2. The state of the provincial budget. The Socred government believes, probably correctly, that the political event it would have the most difficulty surviving would be a deficit budget. During the time of the NDP reign in B.C. and since, the Socreds have harped so loud and so long on the fiscal irresponsibility of any government that couldn't balance its budget that a deficit would be a severe blow to their credibility.

Yet it seems a deficit may be in the wind for this fiscal year. Natural gas sales, which the government was counting on to bring in new revenues, are not holding up. Current estimates are that the revenue shortfall may total $300 million. In addition, the government has already an unexpected expenditure of $135 million for nurses' salaries. And economic forecasting agencies are predicting now that over-all growth in the province may be lower than earlier anticipated for this year.

It is virtually impossible for a government to make up half a billion dollars in revenue without drastically cutting services. Those cuts would have nearly as bad an effect on the government politically as would a deficit.

3. The state of the provincial economy. Political scientists have told us for years that electorates tend to vote governments out when economic times are bad. Although there are more predictions about the future of our economy than there are economists in the province, a significant number predict increasing economic problems — higher inflation, higher unemployment, slow growth.

The government explains regularly and truthfully that the B.C. economy is in better shape than the rest of Canada, or even most of the rest of the western, industrialized world. This, however, does not attract votes from those struggling with ever-rising prices, job layoffs, and astronomic housing costs.

4. The existence of what the government sees as a good election issue. Any government needs a good issue to fight an election on, and the Socreds believe they have found it in their current Ottawa-bashing campaign. The tone of the campaign, they no doubt hope, would be that they need a new mandate from the people to continue the fight to protect B.C. resources from the greedy feds, to maintain B.C.'s heritage for British Columbians, to end the oppression of the west by central Canada. And so on.

The fight over resource control could force B.C. voters to the polls.

Provincial rights

They might go so far as to combine the election with a referendum on the maintenance of provincial rights.

5. The fear of a free-enterprise alternative gathering momentum to split the non-NDP vote. Since the last election, B.C. has been a two-party state: Social Credit and NDP. In recent weeks, however, backroom rumors have started to fly about a resurrection of one or both of the old-line parties. The most likely candidate now appears to be the Liberals who are running an energetic drive to gather money to pay a full-time salary to a new provincial leader.

The existence of a strong third party would doubtless drain more votes from the Socreds than it would from the NDP. The need for a strict two-party system is reinforced if the campaign theme is to be anti-Ottawa a strong Liberal showing, in particular, would draw votes from federalist free-enterprisers who would otherwise probably vote Socred because they couldn't bring themselves to vote for the NDP "socialists."

There is not a chance that a strong Liberal (or Conservative) party could be in place within a year. There is an excellent chance that one could be in place within three years.

All these arguments remain somewhat theoretical, however. More persuasive is a recent series of government actions that show the Socreds to be, at the very least, leaving their options open for a 1980 vote. Consider:

1. The beginning of the anti-Ottawa campaign theme. This has become self-evident. The constantly fruitless negotiations on every subject under the sun, the repeated speeches on the subject by practically every cabinet minister, the tendency to blame Ottawa in public for everything that goes wrong in B.C.

2. The beginning of the development of links between the federal Liberals and the provincial NDP. The one problem with an anti-Ottawa campaign theme is that the Socreds aren't running against the federal Liberals, but against the B.C. New Democrats.

Already, however, the Socreds are beginning to plant public suggestions that those two parties are forming an alliance (however unlikely that may appear on the surface). The most obvious example was Energy Minister Bob McClelland's "private and confidential" press release complaining to federal Energy Minister Marc Lalonde about Lalonde's visit with B.C. New Democrat leader Dave Barrett. McClelland managed to throw in a few lines about previous New Democrat-Liberal meetings as well.

And the private, backroom talk around Social Credit gatherings includes discussion of informal links between Ottawa and the NDP, apparently with the sole aim of helping the NDP in a new provincial election. (If indeed there is any truth to these rumors, one might speculate the links are being formed only because some Ottawa politicians are so frustrated with the Socreds that they would rather negotiate with the New Democrats, the Marxist-Leninists, Rene Levesque or Godzilla than try to do another deal with Bennett and Co.)

Echo of history

3. The efforts of Finance Minister Hugh Curtis to try to recoup the government's budgetary situation. In Curtis's recent announcement of civil service hiring freezes and cabinet directives on spending, there is an eerie echo of history. Back in the summer and fall of 1975, directives very similar to Curtis's were issued from the offices of the NDP finance ministers Barrett and Dave Stupich. Rumors of plummetting revenues abounded.

When the freezes and cutbacks couldn't possibly save the situation, an election was called — before the government had to announce a budgetary deficit.

4. The government's efforts to clear up a number of lingering, controversial domestic issues. In the last few months, the government seems to have been making a determined effort to sort out some of the internal messes for which it had been taking a lot of flak.

In Victoria, for instance, it recommitted itself to funding the convention centre while backing off its previous firm position that the centre should be built on the controversial waterfront site. Instead, said Curtis, city council could tell the province where the city would like the centre built, within reason.

A turnaround even seems likely on the fate of the Princess Marguerite. Transport Minister Alex Fraser, who six months ago wouldn't have sailed the Maggie if it had been the only boat left afloat, is now saying that perhaps the venerable steamship should be returned for the 1981 season. That would certainly be a popular political decision locally.

Compromise

On a wider scale, the government reached a compromise agreement with the B.C. Government Employees' Union on changes to the public servants' pension plans. The strength of BCGEU demonstrations had certainly shown the union would have planted itself firmly in the adversary camp in the next election, had the compromise not been achieved.

5. The private conversations of several cabinet ministers. No sensible minister would ever risk his credibility by saying flat out that election planning was in the wind. But there are lines that are repeated, such as "We're prepared to risk our government on this (the federal-provincial rights issue)."

It's a neat, tidy jigsaw puzzle, developing according to plan.

It must always be remembered, however, that a government has a great advantage in jigsaw puzzle constructing. If at any time until the last piece is put in, it decides it doesn't like the way the picture is developing, it can change things.

It can use the same pieces to form a new picture, one that leads to some type of a referendum on federal-provincial issues rather than to a full election. Or it can even sweep the half-finished puzzle onto the floor, leaving nothing but a few dozen meaningless cardboard shapes.

Maggie the best

The Princess Marguerite will be back on the Seattle-Victoria run next year. That is the conclusion which anyone interested in the profitability of our tourist business is bound to reach after looking at B.C. Steamship's performance, so far, in 1980.

To repeat this year's twinning of the ill-suited Princess Victoria and the Boeing hydrofoil is unthinkable from a dollars and cents point of view. They will cost the government a minimum of $5 million this summer. The Princess Marguerite, even in its worst days, didn't exceed the $1 million level.

True, passenger traffic might have been down even with the Princess Marguerite. But a modest increase in fares would have kept the B.C. Steamship operation close to the break-even point it achieved in 1979. So we have to get back to a one ship operation and that vessel must resemble the Marguerite as much as possible.

We have several alternatives. The government could order a brand new replacement. Built in B.C. yards it would cost upwards of $40 million and take three years to deliver. Or the government could buy an existing vessel from a foreign owner. It would cost at least $15 million in Canadian currency. Or we could lease one. This would involve an annual outlay of, say, $5 million a year.

There are two other options. The government could refurbish the Princess Marguerite at a capital cost of around $5 million and get another ten years out of her. Or it could drop the Seattle-Victoria service altogether.

As the latter alternative ignores the multiplier effects of a dayliner service on Vancouver Island's tourist industry, we are back to the Princess Marguerite option. It's safe — witness Lloyds of London's A 110 1 rating. It is the only one that has a chance of breaking even financially, in the 1980s. And it will please the heritage buffs no end.

Time, however, is running out. The old steamship's plumbing must be replaced and her electrical system overhauled. Upgrading her kitchens and turning part of her car deck into a passenger lounge will take six months. So the government, if it is going to put the Marguerite back into service, will have to act soon. It will have to make a pro Princess Marguerite decision by the end of August at the latest. — Jack Davis, MLA North Vancouver-Seymour

Better the cool of the mall than the heat of the street

Rich is cool, poor is hot

By WILLIAM K. STEVENS

HOUSTON — The Galleria, a spectacular four-tiered shopping mall on Houston's West Side, is like one of those self-contained, hermetically sealed, climate-controlled domed cities that science-fiction writers invent to protect their fictional civilizations from the hostile environments of alien planets. Outside the sealed mini-city, Houston's environment has most assuredly been hostile the last four weeks, the weeks of the heat wave of 1980, in some ways the worst in the Southwest's memory.

The all-encompassing, 100-degree heat, now spreading across the country's midsection to the East Coast, has killed nearly 1,100 people in the last month — 23 in Kansas City Sunday alone. And it has subjected millions more of those without air conditioning to misery that never seems to end.

In St. Louis Sunday, National Guardsmen were going door to door, looking for elderly residents suffering from the inescapable heat. In Kansas City the temperature topped 100 degrees for the 17th consecutive day, passing a record set in August 1936. National Guardsmen continued to deliver fans to residents there.

In the Houston area alone, it is estimated that 75,000 of the poor and elderly don't even have fans.

But inside the Galleria, as the temperature outside rose to 104 one afternoon late last week, skaters flocked to the ice rink that dominates the main floor, gliding and pirouetting and sometimes falling, having a wonderful time, as if it were Rockefeller Center at Christmastime.

That's the way life is lived these days by the middle class of Houston, the city's dominant group, the group that more than any other is associated with the town's image as the rising capital of the Sun Belt. For many of these hundreds of thousands, and millions of others in other cities, the heat wave is, at worst, an inconvenience. They simply stay inside, where the air conditioning banishes discomfort.

Just as there are two Americas, so there are two Sun Belts — one white-collar and affluent, the other working-class and poor. And the heat wave accentuates their differences once again.

On Houston's East Side, far across town from the Galleria and the sleek suburban precincts it mostly serves, blocks here and there are lined by rows of virtually identical one-storey white frame dwellings. In these neighborhoods live the poor and struggling of Houston. Few can afford air conditioning, and misery prevails.

Gray-haired Mary Lyons ("I don't tell that," she said when asked her age) sat on the front porch of one of these houses the other afternoon. The fan inside, she said, was just moving the hot air around. So she was outside to "catch this cool breeze" stirring, if only faintly.

The days are bad enough, she said, but the early part of the night is worse. Lying in bed is "just like you took the sheet out of the dryer and put it on the bed and got right on it." Things cool off pretty well by about 1 a.m., she said, but then there's the next torrid day to face.

All across the East Side, people like Mrs. Lyons, young and old, in groups of one or two or five or six, sit on the front porches or the curbs or congregate on the corners. As the heat drives West Siders inside, to cool comfort, it drives East Siders outside. And as the sometimes ramshackle streets of the East Side are consequently jumping with life, those of the West Side are often deserted during the day, as if a sudden pestilence had wiped out the population.

Without air conditioning, it has been argued, the growth of the Sun Belt as an urban region that is beginning to rival the North would not have been possible.

The West Side Houstonian leaves his centrally air-conditioned house in the morning, after a cool night's sleep. He gets in his car, turns the air conditioner to "Hi Max" and drives to his air-conditioned office. Then he repeats the process in the afternoon. As Northerners live indoors in January, so does he in July.

Not all necessarily goes smoothly for him. Electric bills, for example, have typically doubled during the heat wave. And because the West Sider usually has so much money and time tied up in his lawn, plants and trees, he finds himself in a constant struggle to keep growing things from turning brown, as many already have.

Still, the West Sider's lot is easy compared with that of the East Sider or residents of other areas in the heat wave of 1980. They are still living in that bygone era when there was no air conditioning at all, when there was no choice but to suffer and endure. Some 500,000 people, maybe more, are in such straits in the Houston area, including an estimated 250,000 elderly and handicapped people. Across the drought region, there are millions.

For some of these, the heat wave is not just a matter of inconvenience, discomfort or monetary loss. It is a matter of survival. Most of those who died in the heat were said to be elderly or poor or both.

"It's getting extremely serious," said Marshall Harrison, acting director of the Gulf Coast Community Services Association, which channels some federal relief funds into the community. "It's getting to the point where we will have some very sick people."

'Press power' in Japan

HENRY SCOTT STOKES

TOKYO — Every night the reporters came. They dropped their shoes in neat rows in the narrow entrance hall, Japanese-style, and crowded politely into a small living room of the modest home to wait for the owner to give them scraps of inside information.

Masayoshi Ito, the host, kept up this ritual during his first three days as acting prime minister. Then, on June 15, his long-suffering wife packed his toothbrush and socks and Ito moved to the official prime minister's residence designed by Frank Lloyd Wright. "At last I had a good night's sleep," Ito later told the reporters' "club" covering him. Until he took over after Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira died, he had never felt the pressure of a Japanese reporters' club in full pursuit and, unlike Ohira and other millionaire leaders of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, he did not have a lavish Tokyo home to accommodate them.

Reporters surround late Prime Minister Ohira

The Japanese press, as Ito's experience demonstrates, has extraordinary powers. Convention allows reporters to pursue a politician from early morning until late at night, sometimes ending with a nightcap at his home. Every evening, chauffered limousines line up outside the Tokyo dailies, ready to ferry reporters to the homes of politicians. Reporters also have the run of most government offices and may question bureaucrats with impunity at their desks. But there is a corollary: In return, they are expected to be discreet and they rarely abuse their powers of access. Selecting from a wealth of "background" information, they write highly speculative reports — not always accurate — often overshadowing their newspapers' formal editorials. They play a role in the political process that is probably unrivalled in any Western industrial democracy.

Press power was apparent in the last three weeks as the ruling party struggled to name a successor to Ohira. At first, the newspapers concentrated on two candidates, Yasuhiro Nakasone, a former party secretary-general, and Toshio Komoto, formerly minister of trade. When deadlock ensued, a compromise candidate was found — Zenko Suzuki, a 69-year-old veteran politician whose name, until then, had not been mentioned. In retrospect, it appeared that if the press had picked Suzuki at the start, and later had come up with the other candidates, the outcome could have been different. Was the choice actually dictated, in a subtle way, by the newspapers? Japanese reporters reject the suggestion, but none can deny that their vast organizations, with thousands of reporters and circulations above 10 million, played an intimate role in the choice among unannounced candidates who had been waiting until after Ohira's memorial service to make their moves.

"The curtain came down before the play began," said Shigesaburo Maeo, a party leader, just before the memorial service that brought President Carter and Chinese Prime Minister Hua Guofeng to Tokyo. Without a word on the record from any candidate, the press plumped for Suzuki and the two other potential candidates, then deferred to him. This was the result of intimate, hour-by-hour, contacts between top politicians and reporters. Sometimes carrying messages between the party's powerful factions, journalists helped to form the consensus for Suzuki.

But the close press involvement in the political process also has drawbacks. The "big three" national newspapers — Yomiuri (circulation 12.9 million), Asahi (12 million) and Mainichi (7.3 million) — have enormous power. Yet, in preserving their proximity to the politicians, they pull their punches, often failing to pursue scandals involving their sources. Many Japanese feel that they do not fully inform the public. A case in point involved the state-controlled telecommunications giant, Kokusai Denshin Denwa. Early this year, there were disclosures of KDD gifts, some amounting to bribes, to 190 members of Parliament and top officials, including several cabinet ministers. The press covered the case heavily. Yet, with the approach of the elections on June 22 — handsomely won by the Liberal Democrats — the press let the scandal slip. It did not follow up on the failure of the police to detain any recipients of the company's largess. The authorities even declined to reveal whether they had questioned the politicians and bureaucrats. By election time, public indignation had faded.

For the young reporters in the "clubs" — in daily contact with the mighty — intimate glimpses of power provide a psychic payoff. But to some extent, the system emasculates what is potentially the world's most powerful democratic press. Japanese say "shikata ga nai," resignedly accepting the situation. "It can't be helped."

Who can afford a baby?

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — A shock statistic has just hit Britain from a women's magazine. Jenny Glew, writing in Woman, has added up the entire cost of having a child. She has calculated the cost of diapers, cots, maternity clothes and the like; she has added up the price of food over the long, dependent years, reckoned the costs of family holidays and school clothes, parties and birthday presents and trips to the movies, and come up with the total of £11,614 — about $32,000 per child.

Put like that, who could ever afford a baby? And yet, on close scrutiny, Jenny Glew's estimate doesn't even include everything. She leaves out several items, without which nobody I know has ever succeeded in raising a child.

She mentions the cost of clothes — yes, she has counted in the maternity ones. But has she counted in those half-way-house slacks in which mothers seem to spend months and months before getting back to the figures they had before? Or all that dry-cleaning, if you breast feed, for the after-effects of what happens when the clock strikes and your motherly instincts begin to drip all over your best silk dress?

She hasn't gone into the cost of The Hat, that ceremonial object worn to school graduation, First Communion or Bar Mitzvah; even the most agnostic get let in for such ceremonies once children are involved.

There's also the desperately expensive dress you buy when you suddenly realize with a jolt that your daughter is nearly grown up, twice as pretty as you are and the size you used to be — not to mention the more ordinary garment you buy when the said daughter looks at your dazzling new dress in horror and says, "Oh, Mum, you can't wear that!"

Nothing is said in the survey, either, about telephone bills. First the calls telling everyone you're pregnant, then the next round saying No, not yet, any day now, groan, groan; then proud Papa telling the world what sort of baby it is.

Housebound, you later spend the entire day ringing friends to remind yourself that you are not alone in the world — you wouldn't have to spend that money if you were out working among adults. And all this even before your teenagers take over the instrument, getting on the line for several hours after every meal — or at least as long as it takes for someone else to have done the dishes.

The survey does mention food, presumably meaning the real, cheap, nutritious stuff children can do without for months on end, not the junk food they whine for, nor the McDonalds you grab on your way back from a really punishing trip to the zoo because neither parent has the strength to lift an egg into a pan.

It does not include, either, the vast quantities of salad greens consumed by pet rabbits that some fool has said will make your child tender and loving; or the occasional real meal your husband takes you to in a restaurant, to bring back the lost years when you could get a word in edgeways, and your sentences had verbs in them, and everything.

She doesn't mention the bigger car you may have to buy to transport your brood, the room extensions you vainly hope will get them a bit further away from you, or the evening classes in which you enrol, desperately, to remind yourself that there are some words in English that are longer than the ones in the First Grade Reader.

She has also, being a decent woman at heart, not told the full truth about boys in those desperate years where you first pay for a guitar, so musically educational, and then a very expensive far-flung camping trip to get him away from all his appalling guitar-playing friends.

These are the years when you tell a boy he can no longer be seen dead or alive in those jeans, so he buys some others — exquisite second-hand ones from the used clothes store with little holes in embarrassing places; the years when you keep upping his allowance so he shall pay for everything from now on — and then wind up paying his fare back to school in case the worst happens and he decides not to go on.

She doesn't mention loss of earnings, the price of tranquillizers or that elusive item which, if mothers were cars, you would list as depreciation. Great heavens, I see she doesn't even mention Scotch, the biggest charge of all — for breaking the news of pregnancy to your husband, for bringing you back to sanity after screaming at a toddler in his bath, or to deaden the pain when reading women's magazine surveys telling you how horrifyingly much it is all costing. Can she, I wonder, have ever really had a baby herself?

BCGEU wins pension index battle

The provincial government has all but given up its plans to slap a ceiling on the indexing of public service pensions, a spokesman for the B.C. Government Employees Union said Tuesday.

Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe has introduced a pension amendment bill to replace Bill 28 — a controversial measure which would have eliminated open-ended indexing of pensions for about 41,000 provincial government employees.

Civil service pensions now are indexed quarterly to match increases in the national cost-of-living index. Under Bill 28, they would have been adjusted once a year with a ceiling set at the provincial inflation rate, now running at between seven-and-a-half and eight per cent. The national rate is about 10 per cent.

Union general secretary John Fryer said the new legislation will fund indexing payments to a maximum inflation rate of about 15 per cent, which in effect means it will cover any foreseeable increases in the cost of living.

He termed the legislation a victory of reason.

The bill calls for the government and employees each to contribute 1¼ per cent of an employee's annual salary to the indexing fund, a total increase of one-half of one per cent.

Part of that 1¼ per cent consists of a previously-agreed increase in employee pension contributions and pension abatement funds. When a government employee quits and is refunded his pension contributions, the matching employer contributions — or abatement funds — will remain in the general pension fund. These contributions now are returned to the general revenue of the province.

"Our actuary calculates that that will fund total indexing payments at least up to a 15-per-cent annual rate of inflation," Fryer said.

"If the annual rate of inflation starts to go ahead of 15 per cent a year, then we have something to be concerned about. Now, current figures are running at about 10.1 per cent, so we're insured for a 50-per-cent rate of inflation, which is not totally open-ended I guess, but we think that's reasonable insurance."

Wolfe's new bill also provides for the appointment of representatives from the government employees' unions and the B.C. Teachers Federation to the committee which oversees pension fund investments.

"This is not introducing collective bargaining in terms of pensions, but a more structured basis for providing communications which you might say has been somewhat lacking in some of the pension plans," the minister said.

Wolfe said he will introduce an amendment to Bill 27, the bill amending the Pension (Municipal) Act to bring the retirement provisions or municipal employees into line with the provisions which now apply to teachers and public service employees, which was requested by the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Wolfe's new bill does not affect teachers or college employees. The eight-per-cent ceiling will be placed on their pensions in accordance with the provisions of bills which accompanied Bill 28.

Salt Spring fire doused

Heavy smoke from a spectacular but short-lived slash fire east of Ganges on Salt Spring Island forced a residents out of a small house downwind Tuesday evening, but 18 volunteer firefighters managed to contain the blaze and prevent any actual damage.

There had been some burning of the slash a few weeks ago, but heavy rains had apparently extinguished the fire.

Fire Chief Bob Leask said the fire had probably been smouldering underground. Two days of warm dry weather and a brisk winds dried the slash and the fire broke out anew Tuesday.

A bulldozer that had been used in clearing the property was used to push the slash towards the centre of the fire and to ensure flames didn't spread.

Missing man found today

An unidentified 84-year-old man who went missing Tuesday from a senior citizens outing on Newcastle Island in Nanaimo Harbor was found this morning by RCMP.

When officials of Malaspina Lodge prepared to leave for home they couldn't find the man. Police launched a search but were unable to spot the man.

He is believed to have been in good shape when found.

Drowning victim's name withheld

Nanaimo RCMP are still withholding the name of a 24-year-old Nanaimo man who drowned at the White Rapids area of the Nanaimo River Monday afternoon.

RCMP said the man apparently lost his grip on a rope across the river and was swept into the rapids.

The site of the drowning is a popular swimming spot on the river.

Saanich quashes fee idea

Saanich council won't spend $3,850 for a consultant to determine whether the municipality should spend $60,000 to improve communications with residents on local area plans.

Mayor Mel Couvelier told council the municipality has a staff capable of maintaining liason with the electorate and he could see no reason to waste money on a consultant.

Aldermen recommended a week ago that G.T. Woods Associates Ltd. be hired to evaluate the cost and effectiveness of alternative methods of communication for local area plans.

In other business, council agreed to rezone property ay 3896 Finnerty to allow three single-family houses and called a public hearing to consider rezoning land at 4558 Cordova Bay for a restaurant.

Services set for Iceland scholar

Services for Dr. Richard Beck, a retired scholar in Scandinavian literature and language who died here Sunday, will be held at 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Grace Lutheran Church.

The 83-year-old Icelander who served 38 years at the University of North Dakota, arranged to donate a large collection of Scandinavian literature to the Universjty of Victoria after he retired here in 1967.

He was honored by Scandinavian countries and the U.S. for his scholarship and efforts on behalf of Icelanders in North America, and represented the Icelandic National League when the republic marked its 25th anniversary in 1969.

A writer of poetry, books and articles in English and Icelandic, Beck also lectured extensively in Scandinavia and on this continent.

Beck was born at Reydarfjordur, Iceland, graduated from college at Reykjavik and came to Canada in 1921.

Predeceased by his first wife, in 1961 he married the daughter of an Icelandic pioneer family to Victoria, Margaret Brandson.

Family surviving includes his wife, a son Richard in Iowa, daughter Margaret in California, brother Valdi, of Winnipeg, grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

Cooper wants Thetis Lake ticket spitter out

City council's traffic committee chairman wants an end to charging for parking at Thetis Lake Park.

Ald. John Cooper said today he wants the "ticket spitters" at the parking removed. No other day park in the Victoria area charges admission or makes people pay for parking, he said.

"I'm opposed in principle to ticket spitters because the reason we go to the park is to get away from the gimmicks and gadgets of urban life.

"I would like it removed. Ticket spitters don't belong in a day park."

On Monday, at a meeting Cooper was unable to attend, council's parks committee decided to maintain its policy of towing away vehicles from Thetis Lake parking lot which do not have valid parking tickets.

Motorists must buy tickets from a machine at the Thetis parking lot for 25 cents.

Parks administrator Al Smith said he was concerned about a recent account of a council committee meeting where aldermen said the city had ceased the practice.

"It is most unfortunate that the wrong information appeared," Smith said.

"This has caused extra work and some heated exchanges with people quoting the newspaper article as saying individuals can drive by the ticket spinner with no fear of being towed away."

However, Smith said the city does not enforce a rigid towaway policy at the park.

"We're not adamant about it," he said.

An employee broadcasts over a loudspeaker in the beach area of the park that cars are being checked for valid tickets and warns of the possibility of a towaway.

Before that is done, two employees check to see that a towaway is necessary, and one of them takes a Polaroid picture of the car for the city's records in case of damage claims.

Smith said the threat of a towaway allows the parks department to control traffic. On some three-day holiday weekends, as many as 2,500 cars have bought parking tickets.

"If this feature is denied, I feel it would be very difficult for us to maintain emergency vehicle access due to poor parking habits."

Pool, arena price hike move shelved for now

A proposal to increase the price of passes and special admission rates at the Crystal Pool and Memorial Arena by 20 to 25 per cent was shelved Tuesday by city council's parks committee.

Aldermen tabled the request by city recreation director Jack Morgan until parks committee chairman Ald. Ken Sinclair returns from holidays but it seemed likely the increases will not go through.

Ald. Bob Wright and Ald. Bill McElroy said they would oppose any increase.

Morgan had proposed increasing season pool passes and other charges by about 20 per cent. He also proposed increasing the general admission rate at the arena for children and pensioners from 35 cents to 50 cents, and ice rental an extra $5 from $35 an hour.

Wright said that just last year the city was trying to encourage Victorians to use the Olympic-sized swimming pool and made a number of renovations to the building to encourage swimmers. He said, with price increases there will be consumer resistance.

In his own tourist attractions, Wright said he keeps season passes at a low level because pass holders bring other people who pay regular admission.

"I don't see any economic justification for it. We want to encourage our people to use the facility."

Morgan could not say what the effect of the increases would be on revenue or how many passes had already been sold. But he said the proposed changes would bring Victoria in line with other municipalities.

Health biggest worry, says latest Gallup poll

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians' biggest worry is their health, followed by concern about financial problems, a Gallup poll shows.

Asked to indicate their major worry from a list of six possible areas of concern, 35 per cent of a selected sample of people said health.

Twenty-three per cent were most concerned with making ends meet, 13 per cent with keeping their job, 12 per cent with having enough money in old age, five per cent with having reasonable housing and three per cent with getting proper food.

The remainder cited other worries or said they didn't know.

In a related poll asking what gives people the most satisfaction, 45 per cent listed family and friends, 15 per cent health and fitness, 15 per cent the kind of work they do, nine per cent leisure activities, eight per cent religion and eight per cent financial independence.

The polls were conducted early last month in home interviews with 1,045 adults, 18 years of age and over. A sample of this size is considered accurate within a four percentage-point margin 19 times out of 20.

One child care facility urged

A panel of medical consultants, commissioned to study child health care in the Capital Regional District, has unanimously endorsed the concept of a single regional facility for obstetrics and pediatrics.

Chief consultant was Dr. Richard Goldbloom, head of the Isaac Walton Children's Hospital in Halifax, which is associated with Dalhousie University. Most of the consultants were from university medical facilities or children's hospitals from across North America.

The Queen Alexandra Hospital for Children and the G.R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children contributed $30,000 toward the study which began last January, Alexandra board chairman Michael Field said today.

The rest of the funding came from the provincial health ministry and the CRD.

The consultants made no recommendations on where the unit should be located because their terms of reference incorporated the assumption a regional decision to establish the unit at the new Victoria General Hospital on Helmcken Road would stand.

The preliminary findings of the study, which will receive final editing by Aug. 1 and be available for scrutiny on Aug. 15, has already had a major impact on the design of the Helmcken Road hospital, Field said.

"It will be the finest child care centre in the province, if not in the country."

To help ensure this, Field said, the Queen Alexandra is donating $500,000 from its endowment fund to be used primarily in the pediatric ambulatory care unit. The unit, he said, was non-existent until his hospital and the Pearkes Clinic became involved in the planning.

Field said, in addition to the outside consultants, local doctors and specialists involved with child care are also convinced regionalism is the right way to go.

"I'm convinced that in five years' time Helmcken Road will be part of the city," Field said in reply to opponents of regionalism who say Helcken Road is too far away from the population core.

The announcement of the study's findings comes at a crucial time.

The Capital Regional hospital board today was to debate two issues. One is to consider taking back the decision-making powers from the regional hospital and health planning commission, which strongly supports the regional concept.

The other is whether to allow obstetrics and pediatrics services to continue at Royal Jubilee Hospital for two years after the Helmcken Road hospital is open.

Dr. G. Scott Wallace and a number of other doctors feel it is imperative the RJH continue these services but opponents say this would endanger high-level care at the new hospital because the patient load would be kept below that needed to sustain the activities of specialist physicians and nurses.

WORLD CHAMPION trick roper Rex Rossi will appear with the Royal Lipizzan Stallion Show at Memorial Arena at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 5. Along with the famous stallions, whose heritage takes them back through 400 years of European history, there will be Derrick Rossaire with Tony the Wonder Horse. Dianne Olds will also perform with her two Andalusians. All seats are reserved and tickets are on sale at the arena box office, Mayfair Mall, Hillside Mall, Brandywine, Hatley Park, and at Kev's Sound Centre, Sidney, between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m every day except Sunday.

Sewage treatment cash from Ottawa?

By NORMAN GIDNEY

A long-term plan to build a sewage treatment plant in Victoria was disclosed Tuesday by Ald. Bob Wright.

The plan is designed to avoid bankrupting local taxpayers with the $100 million-plus cost estimate.

The alderman, who is the Capital Regional District's chairman of solid waste management, said he had found several precedents whereby Ottawa had contributed substantial amounts to the cost of construction of treatment plants, all in eastern Canadian communities.

The huge amount of money needed to build a secondary treatment plant is the main stumbling block to the CRD going ahead.

"If we can get the federal government to make a grant or contribution to a treatment plant of say, 15 per cent of the cost, then it becomes a more viable proposition," Wright said.

Without a special federal contribution, local taxpayers would face a mill rate increase of 10 to 12 mills — about a 10 per cent hike on tax bills in the four core municipalities or $80 to $90 a year on an average single-family home at current assessments.

He emphasized that such a treatment plant is a long way off from being built, and the Clover and McMicking Point outfalls are required as interim safety and engineering measures.

"We need to get the sewage off the beaches now," he said.

Coliform counts at Saxe Point now had declined to safe levels with the Macaulay Point outfall in place.

The other two outfalls — they should be in place by next year — will do the same for Victoria and Oak Bay beaches, he said.

"If we went into treatment now, with the planning, the hearings, the construction, the political manoeuvring, it could take eight to 10 years to bring it on stream."

In a report going to the CRD within 60 days, Wright said he will ask the region, local municipalities and the provincial government to petition Ottawa for a special grant of 15 per cent of the capital cost of construction, or $15 million by his estimate.

Ottawa already contributes a hefty amount to sewage treatment plants. Twenty per cent of the cost — not including the substantial debt charges — comes from Ottawa, through the provincial ministry of municipal affairs.

The rest is funded through a 2½-mill levy on local taxpayers — roughly $2 million for the four core municipalities, with the remainder a 75-25 split between the province and the CRD.

Regional district taxpayers thus would have to come up with more than $20 million as their share.

CRD staff's rough estimate of the cost of a treatment plant is $60 million, but Wright said with inflation and delays the cost will be at least $100 million and could easily go higher.

Nurses raise average wage increase figures

During the second quarter of this year, negotiated wage settlement increases in B.C. averaged 12.5 per cent or $1.27 an hour, the labor ministry reports.

This compares with an average nine-per-cent increase for the same period in 1979 and a jump of 1.3 per cent over the 11.2-per-cent increase in the first three months of this year.

The ministry's research and planning branch says the average percentage wage increase for the second quarter would have been less than 11 per cent without the registered nurses' contract settlement.

Some 10,000 nurses, members of the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., gained a 27-month contract which provides for a 44-per-cent salary increase.

That agreement accounted for about 29 per cent of the 34,859 employees covered by second-quarter settlements, the ministry says.

If it hadn't been for that catch-up agreement, the average cents-per-hour increase for the second quarter would have been $1.05 and not the reported $1.27.

No action on N-waste

The provincial ministry of the environment is concerned about the dumping 30 years ago of low-grade radioactive wastes off the B.C. coast, but a spokesman says it's a matter for the federal government.

Speaking for Environment Minister Stephen Rogers, executive assistant Rod Mahrt said in an interview there are three factors in the province's decision not to investigate the issue.

Radioactive wastes come under Ottawa's jurisdiction, he said, and the wastes were dumped at sea outside the three-mile provincial limit. The fact that the dumping occurred more than 30 years ago is also significant, he said.

"I don't see any point in it," said Mahrt when asked if the minister would request a copy of the report from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, which last week revealed that dumping by several agencies, including the University of B.C., took place in the late 1940s.

"You have to remember this is an awfully dated report."

He said B.C. is "naturally concerned" but there isn't much that can be done at this stage.

"It's more a question of bringing it up with federal countrparts," he added.

B.C. and Ottawa have already achieved a great deal in the last five to 10 years in the matter of waste management, he said.

Socreds to publicize constitutional stance

The Social Credit government is planning an information campaign to tell British Columbians its proposals for constitutional change, Premier Bill Bennett said Tuesday.

"This government will go on an active campaign to inform every British Columbian by any means, whether through the media or through town hall meetings, and to involve the broad base of British Columbians in the discussions directly, because obviously this government isn't getting any support from the New Democratic Party on these proposals," Bennett told the legislature.

Bennett's comments followed a request by Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East) that the NDP be taken into the government's confidence on constitutional demands.

"The province of British Columbia, we find occasionally from the newspapers, wants fisheries, railways, harbors and various things, but we don't know on what terms," said Macdonald.

"Instead of working from a hidden agenda and playing those cards close to your own vest?"

Bennett said the government's position papers on constitutional reform were made public in 1978 and amendments made public through the media.

Before the judge

Judge Harold Alder handed a 19-year-old youth a 10-month jail term Tuesday in Victoria provincial court for a Jan. 31 house break-in.

William Clifford Scott, 1226 Rudlin, was caught inside a residence at 3093 Washington by an occupant, ran out but was apprehended a short time later. A watch had been taken in the break-in, court was told.

Scott had received an 18 month term for two counts of breaking and entering on Sept. 5, 1978, in Victoria and previously was given 14 days for two break-ins in Medicine Hat on Aug. 22, 1977.

Another 19-year-old, Kirk Grant MacMillan of 855 Ellery, was given a total of eight months and 15 days in jail by two judges Tuesday.

MacMillan received an eight-month sentence from Judge Gilbert Hogg for possession of a stolen car, impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand made by Colwood RCMP.

Court was told a 1963 Chevrolet was "hot-wired" and taken from in front of a St. James Street residence on New Year's Eve. The vehicle was driven off the road at Yorkshire into a water-filled ditch and MacMillan was arrested. MacMillan was belligerent to the point of spitting in the RCMP officer's eye.

Hogg said he would recommend MacMillan serve his term at the Boulder Bay camp.

Less than an hour later, MacMillan appeared before Judge Blake Allan and pleaded guilty to driving while under suspension.

Allan was told the incident occurred May 26 in the 700-block Dominion where Esquimalt police spotted MacMillan driving a vehicle. When officers caught up with him in his driveway, MacMillan told police he had been under suspension but was now allowed to drive. However, a check indicated that MacMillan was suspended April 12 and was under suspension until June 18, 1980, for accumulation of penalty points.

MacMillan had previous convictions for mischief, taking an auto without the owner's consent, theft, driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08, and two convictions for driving while under suspension.

Allan made the 15-day sentence consecutive to any MacMillan was now serving.

Allan ordered a pre-sentence report for 20-year-old Donald Patrick Jackson, 2988 Leigh Road, who pleaded guilty to auto theft.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Jackson arrived in a pickup at 660 Rockingham about 9:20 p.m. May 16 and later drove off in a Mustang belonging to Carol Arlene Ardin. Laughton said Jackson drove the stolen car to Nanoose Bay, where he struck a bridge and caused $2,000 damage. Jackson then hailed a taxi back to Nanaimo.

Jackson had previous convictions for dangerous driving, wilful damage, driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08, and two counts of driving while under suspension and possession of stolen property. His last conviction for possession of stolen property was Feb. 18, 1980, when he was fined $100.

Allan remanded Jackson, who is not in custody, until Aug. 14 for sentencing.

A 17-year-old youth, Terry James Minnie, of 1656 Earle, has been charged with attempting to defraud a 79-year-old woman of $1,400 in connection with a prepaid burial plot.

Minnie elected trial by judge without jury and a preliminary hearing was set for Oct. 29.

The reason that the charge is only attempted fraud is because the $1,400 cheque was not good.

Alder sentenced a 26-year-old man to seven days in jail for his second drinking-driving offence in less than two years.

Enrique Garcia Romero, 3155 Earl Grey, pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Dec. 23.

Crown counsel Richard Law said Victoria police were called to the Quadra Villa apartments at about 1:50 a.m. because Romero was knocking on a door. Officers called a taxi for Romero but were summoned back two minutes later because Romero was again knocking on the same door.

This time, police arrested Romero for being drunk in a public place and transported him back to police cells.

However, there had been a minor fire in the cells and police again called a taxi for him.

Court was told Romero again redirected the cab to the Quadra Villa and the taxi driver saw him get into his vehicle and drive off.

Police went to Romero's residence and asked how he got his car home. Romero said it was towed there by a tow truck but admitted he drove it when officers said they would check the tow truck firms.

He had been convicted of impaired driving in October, 1978, and fined $375.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Martin Christopher Houghton, 20, of 9211 Lochside, $450; Deryck Ernest Hazel, 49, of 29 Bushby, $450; Robert Ashton, 74, of 4815 Sooke, $400; Donald Gardiner, 33, of 10159 Third, $400, and Marvin Harvey Thomas James, 19, of 12 Cooper, $300.

In addition, James was ordered to complete 80 hours of community service work and was fined $35 for driving without a valid licence.

Liquefied coal plant planned

TOKYO (AP) — Japan, the United States and West Germany will sign an agreement July 31 to construct a coal liquefication plant in Japan, the Japanese newspaper Mainichi Shimbun has reported.

The location of plant has not been determined, the newspaper said, but tentative plans call for a facility to produce 100,000 barrels of liquefied fuel oil a day.

The trilateral project will be operated by Gulf Oil, Ruhr Gulf Oil, Ruhr Coal Corp. and five Japanese companies, Japanese ministry of trade and industry officials were quoted as saying.

Cowichan hoteliers face tourism pinch

DUNCAN — Victoria isn't the only southern Vancouver Island community with tourist woes this summer.

Duncan and the Cowichan Valley also report a drop in tourism, as much as 50 per cent for some businesses.

As is the case in Victoria, no one in Duncan can pinpoint the cause.

Poor weather, the eruption of Mount St. Helens, tight money and rising gasoline prices in the U.S. are among the favorite reasons.

Among the hardest hit businesses is the Silver Bridge Inn in Duncan where occupancy is down 50 per cent from last summer. Other motels and hotels, including the Village Green Inn, report trade down slightly.

"We were expecting a bumper business this year with tourists, as was Victoria," Village Green manager David Rose said, "but it just hasn't happened."

There are more rooms available with the opening of the Cowichan Valley Inn and expansion of the Thunderbird Motel.

"Traffic has not been quite so heavy this year as last," reports Joyce Schmidt, tourist counsellor for the Duncan Chamber of Commerce. "We have had lots of visitors from Alberta, Saskatchewan and Ontario but an absence of Washington and Oregon visitors."

She blamed the drop on an unseasonable amount of rain and the eruption of Mount St. Helens.

Chamber president Maurice Cherneff blamed it on "lousy weather."

"Most people don't want to travel when the weather isn't bright and sunny. Why leave Seattle on a wet, rainy day to go somewhere else where it's wet and rainy?

"I don't believe it's Mount St. Helens, the economy or the gas prices. Who wants to pay good money to be shut up in a motel room with a bunch of kids screaming their heads off because they can't go out to play in the sunshine?"

U.S. company reports

By The Associated Press

Santa Fe Industries Inc., which controls the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway, said Tueday it earned $61 million, or $2.11 a share, on revenues of $771 million in the second quarter, compared with earnings of $55.7 million, or $1.98 a share, on revenues of $628.3 million in the same period a year ago.

For the first half, Santa Fe earnings were $113.3 million, or $3.93 a share, on revenues of $1.5 billion, compared with earnings of $101.9 million, or $3.64 a share, on revenues of $1.2 billion in the first six months of last year.

Union Pacific Corp. reported second-quarter earnings of $79.2 million, or 82 cents a share, on revenues of $1.1 billion, compared with earnings of $112.2 million, or $1.18 a share, on revenues of $978.3 million in the same period last year.

For the first six months, Union Pacific earnings were $181.2 million, or $1.89 a share, on revenues of $2.4 billion, compared with earnings of $196.3 million, or $2.06 a share, on revenues of $1.9 billion in the first half of last year.

Burlington Northern had second-quarter earnings of $41.6 million, or $1.47 a share, a drop from earnings of $68.3 million or $2.63 a share in the second quarter of 1979. The drop occurred despite a 13-per-cent increase in consolidated revenues to $919 million from $815.8 million in the same period a year ago.

For the first half of this year, BN earnings rose 8.2 per cent to $118 million or $4.30 a share, compared with $109 million or $4.20 a share in the first half of 1979. Consolidated revenues for the first half of 1980 rose 24 per cent to $1.8 billion, compared with $1.5 billion in the first half of 1979.

But Burlington Northern directors voted to increase the company's quarterly dividend on common stock from 26¼ cents a share to 31¼ cents a share, payable Sept. 2 to shareholders of record Aug. 1.

Polaroid Corp. of Cambridge, Mass., said Tuesday it had 1980 second-quarter net earnings of $15.06 million, or 46 cents a share, compared with $13.26 million, or 40 cents a share, in the second quarter of 1979.

The company, a leader in the U.S. photographic industry through its quick developing films and cameras, said net earnings for the first six months of 1980 were $32.50 million, or 99 cents a share, compared with $30.37 million, or 92 cents a share for the comparable year-ago period.

Worldwide sales for the first six months of 1980 were $625.52 million compared with $586.68 million in the same 1979 period.

The corporation's directors, at its meeting Tuesday, declared a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share of the company's common stock, payable to stockholders Sept. 20.

American Broadcast Cos. Inc. on Tuesday reported second-quarter earnings were down 5.6 per cent from the same period a year ago, while earnings in the first half were off 5.2 per cent.

ABC said it earned $53.78 million, or $1.91 a share, on revenues of $578.5 million in the second quarter ended June 28. This compared with earnings of $56.96 million, or $2.03 a share, on revenues of $501.8 million in the same period a year ago.

For the first half, earnings were $78.1 million, or $2.77 a share, on revenues of $1.1 billion, compared with earnings of $82.4 million, or $2.94 a share, on revenues of $953.4 million in the first six months of last year.

Eastern Airlines on Tuesday blamed a second-quarter net loss of $15.9 million on a 73-per-cent increase in jet fuel costs and a 29-day strike in June that halted the carrier's Mexican operations.

The loss compares with a net income of $26 million for the same period a year ago, the result of a 58-day strike by United Airlines workers and the grounding of McDonnell Douglas DC-10 jets flown by several of Eastern's competitors, the airline reported.

The Miami-based airline reported a loss of 70 cents a share in the second quarter compared to a 99-cent income a share in the same period last year. For the first six months of 1980, Eastern reported a loss of 61 cents a share compared with a $1.47 income in the first half last year.

Eastern reported a net loss of $12.5 million for the first half of 1980 compared to a net profit of $39.3 million last year. The 1980 operating results showed an operating profit of $4.5 million compared to $6or the second quarter were $850.8 million, up from $726.2 million a year ago.

BCFP earnings down sharply

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. reported net earnings for the first half of the year were down to $29.6 million from $49.1 million for the first six months of 1979.

Share earnings were 97 cents, compared with $1.61 last year, reflected the two-for-one share split approved in April.

The company said in a news release earnings for the second quarter of 1980 were $14.8 million on net sales of $211.7 million, compared with $26.2 million on sales of $204.3 million for the same period in 1979.

Company president K.P. Benson said the demand for market pulp, newsprint and coated paper remained strong throughout the period.

The decrease in earnings was due mainly to lower woods products earnings and higher interest costs from increased borrowings.

Benson said the lower sales volumes and substantially lower prices for lumber, plywood and waferboard reflect the steep decline in U.S. and Canadian home construction.

Cross Canada by train, stunning, breathtaking

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The best way to see Canada is from a train.

And, increasingly, Canadians are seeing it that way.

Three days on Via Rail's Train No. 1 (formerly Canadian Pacific's The Canadian), talking to employees and travellers, were enough to convince me.

But the last annual report of Via Rail, resting among magazines in the clubcar, confirmed it.

Last year was the third since Via Rail began and now has completely assumed responsibility, as a Crown corporation, for providing the passenger train service we used to get from CP and Canadian National.

The number of train passengers has gone up each year since 1977 for a total increase of 1.5 million or 34 per cent. In 1979, 400,000 more people travelled by train than in 1978. The total carried was close to 6,000,000.

It's no wonder more people are travelling by train, not only because it offers the best way to see the countryside but because of the energy crisis and high cost of gasoline.

The last time I travelled across Canada by train was in 1974. The CP service was dilapidated. The coaches were scruffy, repairs were needed. It was hard not to think the company was really trying to drive business away in favor of more profitable freight.

(Interestingly, Via Rail is making a profit, albeit a small one. Last year it earned a net $422,000).

Via Rail admits most of the equipment it operates (inherited from the railway companies) is outdated. But it is making what it calls a concerted effort to bring comfort, service and interior design levels up to today's standards.

Some of this was evident this summer when I saw reupholstered and repainted interiors.

Via Rail says one-third of its passenger equipment had undergone major interior upgrading by the end of last year including complete refurbishing of 42 stainless steel cars.

Via Rail, contrary to some beliefs, is not simply a central ticket agency for passenger train travel.

It is a Crown corporation with sole responsibility for managing one unified system of all rail passenger services in Canada. It owns all passenger equipment and employs a permanent staff of 3,800 representing all workers in rail passenger travel except operating crews.

Majesty of the Rockies is best appreciated from the train

The heart of a happy trip on a passenger train is the crew. Get a good crew, which I did through the various changes from Montreal to Vancouver, and you've got a good journey.

The spirit is infectious and soon many of the passengers know each other.

There were the tourists from all over, from Germany, Britain, Belgium, The Netherlands, Australia, New Zealand and the United States. We met a family from Oshawa, a young man from Courtenay, a British banker trying to refinance a bankrupt oil refinery and a couple from Cordova Bay.

The scenery is beautiful and can be enjoyed at leisure, from the farmlands of the Ottawa Valley to the muskeg and rock and lakes of Northern Ontario, across the open expanses of the Prairies to, best of all, the Rockies.

It isn't part of the Via Rail package, but the travel thrill of a lifetime was an unexpected ride beside the locomotive engineer at the "head end" through Kicking Horse Pass between Lake Louise and Field.

The stunning scenery exceeded anything which can be seen from the Trans-Canada Highway.

Alone except for the train, its whistle and bells and the wildlife near the track, one is simply awestruck crossing the Great Divide at 5,332 feet.

Here, a small stream divides into two, one part flowing east and the other west.

Three locomotives driven by two engineers are hauling the 15 coaches. Each locomotive weighs 150 tons and together they pack 5,000 horsepower needed to climb the highest railway point in Canada.

The train averages 20 to 40 miles for the 55-mile stretch, the highlight of which is The Spirals, a marvel of railway engineering where trains go up (going east) or down (going west) almost 1,300 feet, weaving in and out of a series of tunnels, almost doubling back on the track immediate preceeded.

A 114-car freight train, almost a mile long, snakes around on itself while it traverses the route.

A British locomotive engineer has written (Western Rail Travel) that this section of the Rockies is not only spectacular but equalled by no other section of railway he saw in Canada.

Author-engineer Norman McKillop described the Spiral Tunnels as the most ingenious feat of railway engineering in North America.

He called the scenery, which he also saw from the bird's eye view in the locomotive, breathtaking.

It is, and it is hardly less so from the dome car either.

But for train nuts like me, nothing beats riding the engine. And my thanks, and that of my 14-year-old son Frank, to the train crew who made it possible but wished, also, to remain anonymous.

Eruptions blow dome to bits

vide 24- to 36-hour advance warning of wind shifts that might affect this part of the province.

Meanwhile, air traffic was restricted in parts of the northwestern United States and residents of some towns in eastern Washington were warned they would have to wear face masks again.

Spotters in a plane circling St Helens early today described the new crater as a "large, glowing pit," said a U.S. Forest Service spokesman.

The new crater replaces a lava dome which was blown apart by the latest series of eruptions Tuesday.

Observers were unable to estimate the size or depth of the new crater.

Seismic activity ended at about 1:45 a.m. today when the mountain stopped shaking for the first time since it began about two hours before Tuesday's eruptions.

Just a slight plume of steam was reported over the mountain this morning.

The latest eruptions failed to register on seismographs at Pacific Geoscience Centre at Patricia Bay.

Seismologist Garry Rogers said the series of four eruptions starting at 5:14 p.m., none registering above magnitude 3, was not violent enough to cause seismic waves.

The recently formed lava dome was much thinner than the rock which capped Mount St. Helens for 125 years after the previous series of eruptions, Rogers added.

In the latest eruptions, the U.S. Geological Survey said a pyroclastic flow — a superheated avalanche of ash, gas and rock — poured down the north slope of the mountain almost to Spirit Lake, the resort area 10 km away that became a volcanic wasteland after the mountain's first eruption May 18.

There were no reports of injury late Tuesday and the only evacuation was carried out in the town of Cougar as a precaution. Many of the town's residents had not returned after the volcano's previous eruptions May 18, May 25 and June 12, and some of the 20 to 25 people who did were not fleeing the town again, authorities said.

The eruption came as a surprise to scientists and federal disaster officials who were winding down monitoring activities.

The eruptions began at 5:14 p.m., shortly after a flurry of earthquakes. Six quakes were picked up between 6 a.m. and 11 a.m. and by 3 p.m., they had increased in frequency to about one every five minutes, scientists said.

A series of four or five small earthquakes ended at 5:13 p.m. One minute later came a mushroom-shaped eruption of steam. Subsequent blasts contained ash that darkened the sky.

A second eruption at about 6:26 p.m. towered to 18,200 metres, said Carl Burgeson of the U.S. Forest Service. A third shot of ash rose to about 15,250 metres shortly after 7 p.m. and pulsations followed at 7:20, and at 8:30 p.m.

The U.S. National Weather Service charted the ash plumes that moved north-northeast, following the same path as the ash-laden cloud that caked eastern Washington and northern Idaho with the grit May 18.

46 hotel strikers arrested

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Forty-six striking hotel workers were arrested Tuesday after a large, pot-banging, whistle-blowing demonstration in front of the Hyatt Regency hotel.

The arrests, on the sixth day of a strike by 6,000 maids, bellhops and restaurant workers, was prompted by the near-deafening noise made by several hundred pickets in front of the financial district hotel.

"We wanted to force arrests by making a lot of noise," said one striker who asked not to be identified.

Police notified picket leaders they were violating the city's noise ordinance after about an hour of the loud demonstration by several hundred strikers.

When the noise continued, officers arrested several people, including Charles Lamb, head of Local 2 of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders Union.

When police tried to remove those arrested, pickets sat down in the street and were also taken into custody. After being cited for making too much noise or failure to disperse — misdemeanors which carry maximum penalties of $500 fine and six months in jail — the protesters were released.

One man was also charged with resisting arrest, police said.

The hotels made what they called their final offer Sunday — a 31-per-cent wage increase package over the next three years. Union officials say that "dignity for hotel workers," not wages, is the central issue in the strike.

The strike has forced the Hilton Hotel and Stanford Court to close, while temporary workers and managers are making beds and carrying luggage at other hotels.

Shipyards face layoffs

Without the full subsidy all foreign business could be lost.

Also at stake is the $50 million-plus project to raise the decks of seven stretch ferries next year.

The board of B.C. Ferries will decide early in 1981 whether B.C. yards will get the contracts.

"It will be difficult for us to get these projects without the full subsidy," Challinor said.

The government proposes to raise the decks of seven vessels to allow a complete second level to be constructed, allowing each ferry to carry 300 cars, instead of the present limit of just under 200.

In 1979 the cost of each project was estimated at between $7 million and $9 million, compared with the $30 million cost of building a new ferry.

A spokesman for B.C. Ferries said the Ottawa action will force a tough decision about whether local yards can be used.

Both the provincial government and the Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repair Association will continue to press the federal government for a return to the full subsidy.

Transportation Minister Alex Fraser has sent a telegram to federal Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin asking that the full subsidy be reinstated.

Fraser said the announcement came without prior consultation.

City sympathetic but can't afford to donate park land

All he wants is to do is remember the kids

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

When Joseph Haegert was a boy, children were seen and not heard.

And children like Joseph, who had to work for a living, weren't often tipped or even thanked.

Haegert was an eight-year-old orphan who came to Victoria with his guardian in 1910.

At 13 he was put to work delivering magazines for $8 a month and his childhood memories are of hard times and few kind words.

Boiled chicken feed was his breakfast, lunch and supper many times in those days.

Those memories helped make Haegert, 78, an advocate of the young and an active man in community affairs.

He is the president of the Cool-Aid Society, and one of his three sons is the organization's doctor.

But his efforts to persuade city hall to convert two properties near his home into a children's park failed Tuesday night.

City council's parks committee was moved by Haegert's letter urging that a park on Pembroke be named for "Mom Alexander," a longtime Fernwood resident and member of a Victoria pioneer black family.

But not far enough to forego the sale of two city-owned lots at 1321-25 Pembroke needed for the park site Haegert wants.

Aldermen did vote, however, to honor Mrs. Alexander by naming after her the little green patch created by the closure of Pembroke on the west side of Fernwood, a vest pocket-sized park about as big as an average backyard.

Joseph Haegert surveys property

"I believe that Mom Alexander (who lived at 1360 Pembroke, almost opposite the proposed park) was the sweetest lady this city has ever known," Haegert wrote. "She was one of a black family which came to Victoria in the gold rush days."

Haegert claims Fernwood's Neighborhood Improvement Program committee bought the land several years ago intending it as a park for the children of Fernwood, where there isn't much green space to play.

But aldermen say the city shelled out $75,000 for the land as a way of providing extra funds to finish several other NIP public works in the district, and now the city needs the money back.

So the house at 1325 Pembroke and adjacent lot will soon go on the real estate market.

With his wife Gertrude, Haegert has lived in his small, two-storey house at 1516 Pembroke ever since he carried his bride over the threshold 47 years ago. They raised three sons and a daughter there.

A colorful character, who says his father was a Prussian adventurer and his mother the daughter of a British army surgeon, Haegert was born in India where his father ran a mission hospital.

He was sent to school in England after his parents died and tutored by a governess who told him it was proper to look down his nose at servants and the working class.

But Haegert's inheritance was frittered away by a money-loving guardian shortly after the move to Canada and he became a member of the working class himself.

As a youth he was exposed to the seamier side of Victoria life.

"As a messenger boy I saw a side of life no other person would ever see," he remembers.

Gambling, prostitution and heavy drinking were common and one of Haegert's most frequent deliveries around town was whisky from the Hudson's Bay store — the only outfit allowed to sell hard liquor.

"There were pubs and brothels all over, the place was full of prostitutes."

Long lines would form as soldiers and sailors waited their their turn to enter one of the houses of ill repute.

"Opium smoking was something nobody thought anything about in those days."

Respectable women did not drink with men and did not work outside the home.

"As soon as a woman got married, she was fired. It was entirely a man's world in those days."

Victoria was a city of boardwalks and Pandora Avenue, where popular evangelist Dr. Oliver pitched his tent on Sunday, was a sea of mud most of the time.

No one worked Sundays, but all the stores were open six days a week until midnight and filled with people.

"Few were buying, they just looked around. People were poor."

Movies, at a nickel a show, were popular. The Victoria Theatre, where Eaton's is now, always seemed to have a hypnotist on the bill.

Horse and buggy was still the mode of transportation and the local brewery used large dray horses to pull its wagons.

Haegert graduated to a horse and wagon when he was 13 to make his deliveries.

"Horses were running away all the time. Everybody used to stop runaway horses. There was nothing to it at all."

Illiteracy was a problem, as were a number of diseases like tuberculosis and diabetes.

Haegert, who wanted to be a doctor, passed university entrance exams even though he had little formal schooling, but bad health prevented him from completing his training.

He worked as a wireless operator on CPR ships before becoming an electrical technician.

But he has never forgotten how difficult it was was for a young boy to grow up alone in an environment where people did not care about children.

And that's one of the reasons he wanted that new park for Fernwood kids.

New bid for alarm on prison escapes?

By BRENDA DALGLISH

A new campaign may be launched to have the federal government install an alarm system to warn nearby residents when prisoners escape from William Head minimum security prison.

Resident John Waterman said today — following the escape of three prisoners Tuesday — the time might be right to re-submit a proposal made several years ago to the federal justice ministry.

"If there were an alarm it would eliminate the possiblity of an escaper catching anyone unawares," said Waterman, one of the residents who made the original proposal.

Ottawa turned down the suggestion then, saying an alarm might only cause the community and the escaper to panic and increase the possiblity of violence.

Waterman disagrees.

"If this were a residential area that might be true but because it's rural an escaper can avoid going near residences or out buildings if he knows people might be expecting him."

Residents of Metchosin, and particularly those near the prison, are apprehensive.

"Sure we're concerned about the escapes," said Geoff Hett who lives on William Head Road.

"We know the prisoners want to get away from here as fast as they can but with all the farm buildings around to hide in we're worried a child may just walk into a hayloft or something at the wrong moment."

Another resident wondered about the number of recent escapes.

"I hate to condemn people and it's easy to say someone else isn't doing his job but there seem to have a lot of escapes the last while."

Since the beginning of this year 10 prisoners have escaped in five separate incidents.

He suggested the wharf, parts of which have been frequently used as a raft, might be removed.

Except for an abandoned raft, the prisoners who escaped Tuesday vanished without a trace, Colwood RCMP spokesman said today.

Victoria ensemble tops field

A Victoria ensemble is the first recipient of the new Richard W. Cooke Trophy in the National Competitive Festival of Music.

The trophy, together with a $300 bursary provided by the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, was awarded to the St. Matthias Church Chamber Singers for excellence in the small ensemble category.

Frances Pollet is the musical director of the group.

Ensembles may enter tapes on the recommendation of regional adjudicators for judging in Toronto.

The St.Matthias Chamber Singers won top marks and an outstanding adjudication from judge David Astor in the Greater Victoria Music Festival last spring.

Beer supply all but gone; settlement chances dim

The tap supplying Greater Victoria with beer was all but turned off today as the province appeared headed for a brewery shutdown similar to one in Alberta.

Most liquor stores had no beer left and spokesmen said they're not expecting any more.

There has been no response from the Brewery, Winery and Distillery Workers Union to a companies' ultimatum that the employees accept a final offer by Friday or be locked out.

Both sides expressed doubt there would be a breakthrough before the deadline.

The companies' final offer amounted to a 29.7-per-cent increase that would raise a bottling line worker's salary to about $27,000 a year by the end of the agreement, but the union says security and not wages is the main issue.

Meanwhile, strikes and lockouts reduced beer production in Alberta to a trickle today — 16,000 gallons a day from Uncle Ben's Brewery in Red Deer, the only independent brewer in the province.

Alberta's major brewers locked their doors at midnight Tuesday when they were unable to reach a contract agreement with their workers.

The lockout was the brewers' response to strike action earlier this month by workers at Labatt's in Edmonton and Alberta Brewers Agents employees in Edmonton and Calgary. It signalled Alberta's third consecutive summer beer drought.

Things weren't much better for drinkers who prefer something stronger than beer. Workers at Alberta liquor control board warehouses in Calgary and Edmonton are off the job despite government anti-strike legislation and supplies are being depleted.

Management personnel were redistributing supplies between stores but an outlet in the North Hill Shopping Centre in Calgary was closed Tuesday when employees refused to cross an Alberta Union of Provincial Employees picket line.

No panic but dog shots urged

Dog owners whose pets have a high exposure to other dogs should have the animals vaccinated against an intestinal virus called canine parovirus, a Victoria veterinarian said today.

Dr. Alan Hoey of the Oak Bay Pet Clinic was commenting in an interview on a report from eastern Canada that there has been an increase in the number of dogs suffering from the disease in many Canadian centres.

The symptoms of the virus are severe vomiting and bloody diarrhea and, if untreated, it can be fatal.

But Hoey cautioned that to date media reports on the virus have been overblown.

"The story is much larger than the problem," he said.

Hoey said the disease first showed in Victoria about two years ago. He treats four to five dogs a year with the problem.

When you multiply that number by the 15 or 20 veterinarians in the area and add another 100 mild cases that aren't detected, it is fair to say there are probably a few hundred cases a year in this area, he added.

But there is no brush-fire epidemic that is going to devastate the dog population.

Older dogs have perhaps a 40 per cent greater chance of suffering from the virus but for others the risk is lowered to around four per cent, he said.

There is more risk for those dogs which are put in kennels or attend dog shows where there is greater exposure to other animals from different areas, Hoey said.

The owners of those animals would be wise to make use of a vaccine called Parovocine to protect their pets.

But for the average dog the risk is not that great and the virus can be treated.

CBC building sale soon

The CBC building in Victoria is expected to go up for sale later this summer, the corporation's property manager said today in an interview from Ottawa.

"I expect to get the papers together soon," said Bob Burns.

He said he is waiting for documents from CBC lawyers in Vancouver, and when they arrive he will start the tendering process. The CBC would advertise the building and property — estimated to be worth $2 million — locally and invite bids.

Burns said there had been some interest expressed by the provincial government in the brightly-painted empty structure at Blanshard and Kings, built two years ago as a television studio for a projected CBC station in Victoria.

"The province did show an interest but I don't know if they're very serious."

Others reported to be interested in the building include Victoria's CHEK television, CKVU of Vancouver and a non-profit local group, CFRE Public Broadcasting Society which is planning a commercial-free TV station.

"We hadn't heard that yet," said CFRE treasurer John Elliott when told of the CBC's plans to sell.

Chain crash on highway

Several vehicles were involved in a chain reaction pileup on Patricia Bay Highway near Swartz Bay shortly after 11 a.m. today.

Sidney RCMP detachment said there were unspecified injuries when six to nine vehicles crashed at the intersection of Patricia Bay Highway and McDonald Park Road.

Three ambulances and a fire truck were dispatched to the scene.

Restoration resumes soon

Work to restore the 117-year-old Temple Emanuel synagogue should resume in a week or two, Martin Levin, chairman of the restoration committee, said Tuesday.

Work stopped in May after stucco was stripped from the brick exterior for several reasons, mainly to allow a sub-contractor who will remove paint from brick to obtain a special chemical from eastern Canada.

Last parade for 'Rivets' after 37-year career

By AB KENT

Burnished badges flashed in a ripple of red serge as they brought the Horseman out for his last parade Tuesday.

Retired commissioner of the RCMP, Charles E. Rivett-Carnac, who was simply "Rivets" to fellow members of the force in a career lasting nearly 37 years, was taken to Royal Oak Cemetery escorted by a guard in full dress, friends, family, colleagues and dignitaries.

After cremation the ashes were to be taken to the police cemetery at Regina for burial with his peers and predecessors.

Rivett-Carnac for five years was commanding officer of the RCMP in British Columbia and returned to Victoria for his retirement 20 years ago. He died Friday in Royal Jubilee Hospital. He was 78.

Organization of the RCMP in this province, following years of law enforcement by a provincial police force, was one of Rivett-Carnac's major undertakings in a career that touched on war, adventure, intrigue, the glamor of films and the privations of life on Arctic patrol.

The romance of the Canadian northwest — and a family heavily involved in colonial policing — drew Rivett-Carnac to Canada with the intention of joining the force.

In 1923 he was accepted for the Mounties in Montreal, where the officer commanding Quebec district noted that he spoke French, Hindustani, Assamese and English and commented, "I would strongly recommend his engagement."

Less than a year after his entry, he volunteered for Arctic duty, was accepted and served two years in Mackenzie subdistrict, during which he became corporal.

Transfers and promotions came quickly.

Between 1924 and 1931, when he made sergeant, then inspector in the course of one month, Rivett-Carnac served in detachments at Norman, Fort Smith, Penticton, Mayo and Dawson.

With his commission Rivett-Carnac undertook the role of adjutant at training depot, Regina, April 1, 1931, and on Nov. 16, 1932 he was married to Mary Dillon Ware, of London, Ont.

The following July Rivett-Carnac was posted to command "G" division's Western Arctic sub-division, headquartered at Aklavik, where his first daughter Beverley Ann was born in 1933.

Two years later he was posted to Ottawa where he became intelligence officer for the whole force, and also edited the RCMP Quarterly. In 1939 he came west again, to take charge of Regina subdivision, during which in 1940 his second daughter Mary Frances was born.

Promotion to superintendent was given in 1942, followed by command of Winnipeg subdivision, then command of the intelligence section of criminal investigation back in Ottawa. Rivett-Carnac was given temporary charge of criminal investigation in 1945, the post in which for six months he directed the secret investigation of the Igor Gouzenko affair, the Russian cipher clerk who defected in Ottawa.

Rivett-Carnac remained head of the section until 1947, but was referred to as assistant director of criminal investigation. On Nov. 1 he was made officer commanding "F" division, Regina and a year later was made assistant commissioner in Saskatchewan.

He was named head of the force in B.C. on April 10, 1951, and devoted three years to the reorganization of the RCMP.

In 1956 he was promoted to deputy commissioner at Ottawa headquarters.

Within two years he would have retired with the maximum 35-year service limit, but for administrative reasons his term was extended. Meanwhile, political troubles in Newfoundland resulted in the protest resignation of commissioner Nicholson in March 1959, and Rivett-Carnac was brought back from retirement leave to take over the top post.

When the commissioner finally walked down the steps of the grey stone headquarters building for the last time he was "profoundly thankful I was still on my feet.

"It was the end of the pursuit that I'd started nearly 50 years previously. I was grateful to be alive and even more thankful for all that I'd learned," he wrote.

Roy makes it his night

Organizers hadn't really planned it that way but it was Roy Haslam night Tuesday at Western Speedway.

And the Victoria driver had the crowd of more than 4,000 on his side right from the start.

There was a big cheer for Haslam, even though he placed second to Larry Hegeman of Lakeside, Calif., in the fast heat and a little later he came out to receive the trophy as the meet's most-popular driver, a decision of the fans.

Then Haslam delighted them by winning the feature 75-lap main event in the Speedweek Northwest series for superstocks.

It was obvious early in the evening that there was going to be some fast and furious racing when the track record of 16.35 seconds held by Victoria's Joe Musfelt was broken six times in the time trials.

Fastest of them all was Ron Esau of San Diego who became the first driver ever to break the 16-second barrier around the Langford oval with his time of 15.921 seconds but he had to settle for third place in the "A" trophy dash behind Musfelt and another popular Victoria driver, Roy Smith, and fourth place in the fast heat.

Haslam and Esau became involved in a thrilling duel for the lead early in the main event when the pair sped past veteran Red Farmer of Hueytown, Ala., on the 13th lap. Esau grabbed the lead on the 16th and held off Haslam until the 51st lap when his two front tires blew.

Haslam went ahead but lost the lead on the 69th lap to Bob Fox of Bremmerton, Wash. When their cars bumped on the first turn of the 70th lap, however, Fox spun out and lost a lap and Haslam flashed to victory.

Odie Robertson of Denver, Colo., who won the first leg of the Speedweek Northwest series at Skagit Speedway during the weekend, broke a rear axle in practice Tuesday and missed the time trials, trophy dash and heat races waiting for a replacement. It arrived in time for him to race in — and win — the 30-lap "B" main event.

That qualified Robertson for the "A" main but he had to start right at the back of the 21-car field and was never really in contention.

There's another Speedweek Northwest leg at Western Thursday night and the series winds up Sunday at Evergreen Speedway in Monroe, Washington.

Moscow signs prove mystery

MOSCOW — Olympic Moscow is a tower of Babel of sign language, with few visitors speaking Russian and most of their hosts speaking nothing but Russian.

A crash language-training program during recent months seems to have had only limited success, and even some young Russians hired as interpreters have had to search for help in speaking with foreign visitors.

Olympic planners foresaw the problem and created a bewildering array of stylized logos meant to represent everything from ice cream parlors to rowing canals. A good many of these signs have proved to be a mystery to Russians and visitors alike.

More than a year ago the planners announced that thousands of translators, guides, waiters, drivers and hotel staffers would be ready for the games with "a good command of English, German and French."

But the typical waiter today, even in restaurants opened especially for Olympic visitors, confines himself to an English "please" while seating his guests, then lapses into Russian.

Some 5,000 city taxi drivers have been advertised as ready to speak English, French, German or Spanish, but spot checks have turned up few who can.

On more than one occasion, taxi drivers have been unable to understand the names of Olympic sites and have ended up taking their riders back to their hotels.

A result of the language barrier is that some foreigners are sticking closely to the Olympic sites, travelling only on Olympic buses and eating in the special restaurants provided for them, nervous about venturing out into a city that feels strange to them.

When they do, however, they often find the Russians delighted to have the chance to help a foreigner, sometimes going out of their way to find a destination despite the language barrier.

Language troubles at the Olympics highlight the difficulty the Soviet Union is having in a widespread program to make Russian one of the common languages of the world.

The Soviet Union has been opening Russian-language schools here for foreign students, propagandizing the learning of Russian abroad, and even has suggested the awarding of Soviet medals to outstanding foreign Russian students.

But few of the visitors here this summer have even an elementary knowledge of Russian, and the cyrillic alphabet creates a barrier even to the reading of street signs.

There was more criticism of the western press today for coverage of the Games that concentrated on hostility to the Soviet Union.

Vladimir Popov, vice president of Moscow Olympic Organizing Committee, was asked at a news conference about a cartoon in the French paper France Soir. It showed three Soviet security men standing on an Olympic-style medals rostrum receiving medals for maintaining law and order.

The cartoon was printed beside a story of an Italian gay rights demonstration in Red Square, at which Western reporters and photographers complained they were manhandled by police.

"I would like to ignore this kind of coverage . . ." Popov said. "This was a disgusting case, a frame-up which has offended the dignity and feelings of our people.

"It had nothing to do with the Olympic Games."

Popov said he would consider referring another story, in the London Daily Mail, to the International Olympic Committee, if the organizing committee felt it was justified. But he admitted he had not seen the story and would want to study it before taking action.

A reporter said the story referred to the possibility of an assassination attempt on President Leonid Brezhnev at last Saturday's opening ceremony. It was referring to inconsistent security arrangements at the Lenin Stadium.

The Olympic hymn was played at an Olympic medals ceremony for the first time Tuesday, first when Luciano Giovannetti of Italy won the trap shooting and then when British swimmer Duncan Goodhew won the 100-metre breaststroke. Both the British and Italian committees decided not to use national flags or anthems, as a token protest against Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Record-smashing day

Champ says hair 'bloody nuisance'

MOSCOW (CP) — At the age of 10, Duncan Goodhew lost his hair after a fall from a tree damaged his nervous system.

Several years later, the young Briton was the envy of his international swimming rivals, when they started shaving their heads in hopes of trimming a few hundredths of a second off their racing times.

After collecting his country's first Olympic gold medal Tuesday in the 100-metre breaststroke, Goodhew said he considers his lack of hair "part of my person."

"I don't want any. It's a bloody nuisance."

Goodhew, a silver medallist in the event behind Graham Smith of Edmonton at the 1978 Commonwealth Games, won in one minute, 3.34 seconds, fractionally short of his career best, ahead of Arsen Miskarov of the Soviet Union, 1:03.82, and Peter Evans, 1:03.96.

Smith, of course, was absent because of the Olympic boycott, as were Gerald Moerken of West Germany, who holds the world record of 1:02.86, and John Hencken of the United States, who set the Olympic record of 1:03.88 at Montreal four years ago.

The boycott notwithstanding, the 100 breaststroke was the only swimming final of the day in which no records were broken.

The most awesome performer was Vladimir Salnikov of the Soviet Union, who became the first man to break the 15-minute barrier in the 1,500-metre freestyle with a time of 14:58.27.

The first male swimmer to break a world record in three days of competition, he surpassed the previous mark of 15:02.40, set by Brian Godell of the U.S. at the Montreal Olympics and immediately said his next target is the 400-metre record of 3:50.49 held by Peter Szmidt of Montreal.

Salnikov already owns the 800-metre record and was the world's best at the shorter distance until Szmidt dethroned him last week.

The unbeaten East German women's team took its fourth gold medal as Ines Diers captured the women's 400 freestyle in the Olympic record time of 4:08.75, followed by two team-mates.

Meanwhile, Rica Reinisch, who had equalled the world record of 1:01.51 for the 100 backstroke Sunday in her leg of the women's medley relay, improved it to 1:01.50 in her heat of the individual event.

While the East Germans trail the Russians 10-5 in gold medals acquired in the 22 events completed so far, they hold a 5-3 lead over the Soviet athletes in world records broken.

In all, 11 world marks have fallen — four in swimming, four in weightlifting, two in cycling and one in shooting.

Two East German cyclists joined the parade Tuesday as Lothar Thoms won the cycling time trial in 1:02.955, wiping out the old mark of 1:04.02 by Niels Fredberg of Denmark which had stood since 1973. And Harald Wolf led the first-round qualifiers in the 4,000-metre individual pursuit in 4:39.96 as the first six riders surpassed the former mark of 4:43.09.

The Soviet gymnasts won the men's team competition, having led from the beginning of Sunday's preliminary round, and the Russians ran their gold-medal total to four for the day with victories in weightlifting and Greco-Roman wrestling.

The winning lifter was Viktor Mazin, who hoisted a total of 290 kilograms in the 60-kilo division to give the host country its second title in three weight classes contested to date.

Luciano Giovannetti of Italy brought Italy its first championship of the current Games when he fired his second consecutive perfect round to win the three-day clay pigeon event with 174 points of a possible 175.

Lions' win sets up fight for first place

Times News Services

Harry Holt figures he's found a new job with the B.C. Lions while elusive Leon Bright just keeps getting better at his task.

Both played key roles Tuesday night as the Lions mauled Winnipeg Blue Bombers 26-6 in a Canadian Football League game before 23,214 fans.

The victory gave undefeated B.C. a share of first place in the Western Football Conference with Edmonton Eskimos and sets up a battle for the conference leadership with the Grey Cup champions July 30 at Commonwealth Stadium.

Holt filled in for the injured Tyron Gray on kick returns and scored a touchdown on a 65-yard runback while Bright gave the Bombers' special teams fits with kick returns that consistently provided the Lions with good field position.

Bright returned four punts for 98 yards including one burst of 44 yards and got 96 yards in kickoff runbacks — including a 48-yard scamper that set up a field goal.

In addition, Bright and the hard-hitting Joe Fourqurean anchored a Lions defensive secondary that proved too tough for the Bombers once they got near touchdown territory. Bright admits he's still learning defence after starring at running back for three seasons.

"I did pretty good and I don't think he's (Lions coach Vic Rapp) going to take me off there now," said Holt who also had an 86-yard return called back because of a clipping penalty to Tony Proudfoot.

Holt's touchdown moved the Lions in front 20-3 with less than 20 minutes remaining in the game. It also restored the Lions' momentum after they failed to score in three tries from the Winnipeg two-yard line as Paul Bennett made two touchdown-saving tackles.

Wide receiver Al Charuk, who scored B.C.'s other TD on a 21-yard second-quarter reception from quarterback Joe Paopao, added timely catches to Bright's kick returns in the first half to set up scores.

Placekicker Lui Passaglia converted both touchdowns and was flawless in kicking two field goals of 36 yards and others of 39 and 45 yards.

The closest the Bombers could get to the B.C. goal line was eight yards away late in the fourth quarter. Their only points came from field goals of 34 and 31 yards by Trevor Kennerd.

The Bombers came close to paydirt several times but quarterback Dieter Brock's receiving corps was plagued by balls that slipped through fingers or bounced off chests.

Jauch said his receivers were trying too hard as Mike Holmes dropped a Brock bomb at the goal line and Joe Poplawski twice tipped a pass before he ran out of the end zone.

Paopao had another consistent night by completing 16 of 24 passes for 204 yards. Charuk was his leading receiver with three catches for 91 yards while Robert Woods gathered in five Brock passes for 95 yards.

In Montreal, Don Sweet's 38-yard field goal with eight seconds left to play gave the Alouettes a thrilling 17-14 victory over Hamilton Tiger Cats.

The victory was Montreal's first of the season after losing two in a row. The triumph also pulled the Alouettes into a tie with Hamilton and Ottawa for second place in the Eastern Conference.

Budgets split series after Raider comeback

Victoria Budgets overcame some slick fielding by the Southern Truck Raiders from Phoenix to earn a split in their Super Series softball doubleheader Tuesday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Budgets edged the Raiders 1-0 in the opener but the visitors came up with three runs in the top of the seventh of the second game to win 3-2 before around 500 wind-chilled fans.

The two teams square off in another twin-bill starting at 7 tonight.

Third-baseman John Green provided all the Budgets offence in the opener by drilling a leadoff home run in the second inning.

The run was all Dave Wilson really needed for the pitching victory. He struck out eight batters, didn't allow any bases on balls and gave up only two hits — a second-inning single by Butch Chambers and a two-out double to right-fielder Dave Ferris in the third.

Some flawless Phoenix fielding was highlighted by a double play in the sixth inning after Reg Underwood drew a leadoff base on balls.

Bob Burrows slashed a drive at pitcher Jim Sharp, who threw out Underwood as he was sliding to second. Shortstop Mike Strausser evaded Underwood and relayed the ball to first base to beat Burrows by a step.

Budgets appeared to have a comfortable lead after scoring two runs in the first inning of the second game but couldn't solve the pitching of Gil Aragon the rest of the way.

In the first frame, Aragon hit leadoff batter Dave Williams, designated hitter Pete Songhurst followed with an infield single and Williams went to third on a passed ball. Underwood followed with a single to score Williams and Burrows drove Songhurst home with a sacrifice fly.

Then things fell into place for Raiders in the top of the seventh.

Budget pitcher Mark Smith, who finished with 11 strikeouts, hit leadoff batter Dennis Umble.

Chambers followed with a single to right field and Umble came in to score when fielder Dennis Eckert dropped the ball. Sharp replaced Chambers as a pinch runner and scored when second-baseman Randy Benn's throw to the plate was late after Strausser had smacked a grounder.

Strausser reached second on a wild pitch and scored what proved to be the winning run on a single by Jerry Kellerhals.

Dolphins take year out

Victoria Dolphins are no more — at least for this year.

Directors of the B.C. Big Four Junior Football League club voted Tuesday night to suspend operations for this season but will be looking at their options again at a later date.

"We just weren't getting the players out," said past-president Rick Croteau.

The club was started by Frank Hindle and Sam Taylor in 1971. Hindle served as the first coach and was followed by Roy Vollinger and Ken Werrun before stepping back into the post for a short time. He was succeeded by Brian Gingell and the team was coached last season by Paul Shortt.

Tonight in sports

Baseball, softball and lacrosse are on the sports program tonight for Greater Victoria fans. On TV, there's the choice between CFL football and baseball.

In lacrosse, Victoria Shamrocks play the recently-crowned world champion Coquitlam Adanacs in a Western Association game at 8 at Memorial Arena.

For baseball fans, the B.C. Senior Babe Ruth championships continue at Lambrick Park with games at 3 and 6 and at the same site in the Cosmopolitan Senior Amateur League, it's Capital Radiators and Farmer Construction at 6:30.

And in softball, with all games starting at 6:30, Athletics take on Tally-Ho in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's League game at Central Park, it's Capital Builders versus Knowles Realty in the Heywood Men's League at Heywood Avenue Park, Labatts play Mayfair Insurance and James Bay Inn takes on Mega Power in the Macdonald Men's League at Macdonald Park, and in the Victoria-Saanich Women's League at Hyacinth Park, Vidalin Construction meets Athletics and Strathcona Stingers play Island Dryco.

Television

For all the football fans, the Saskatchewan Roughriders are at Calgary in a CFL game on Channel 8 at 6:30 and, for those who like to stay up late, there'll be a taped showing of Tuesday's B.C.-Winnipeg game on Channel 2 at 11:45.

There's baseball — Montreal Expos at Atlanta — on Channels 2 and 6 at 7:30.

Audubon tree book eases identification

Some rambling notes along the trail:

It's another winner.

The Audubon Society Field Guide to North American Trees, Western Region, carries on the high quality of the organization's identification series.

It contains an easy-to-understand key based on leaf shapes, color of flowers and fruiting structures by which even a beginner can quickly answer the question of: "What is it?"

Like the other Audubon guides in the series, this one is bound in a plastic cover and is a convenient size (4"x7½"x1") for carrying in a pack.

Written by Elbert L. Little, the book is distributed by Random House of Canada and lists at $12.95 — a relatively inexpensive price tag considering the quality and numerous color plates.

The Western Canada Wilderness Committee was formed recently in Victoria to help spearhead wilderness preservation in British Columbia.

Their first project will be the publication of a calendar in 1981 featuring 12 key areas, each sponsored by an organization, in the province.

Some of the areas, all of which are proposed for some form of preservation, are South Moresby Island, Gitnadoix, Princess Louisa Inlet, Akamina-Kishinena, Robson Bight, the Southern Chilcotins, Tahsish River, the Valhallas and Stikine Canyon.

Further information on the group may be obtained by telephoning 384-5112.

What utter rot!

We see the Interior Lumber Manufacturers Association is claiming thousands of forestry and related jobs are being lost each year because of creation of parks and other reserves.

Firstly, there hasn't exactly been a large-scale effort by our current provincial administration to set aside such preserves.

And, secondly, what about the tourist-related jobs — both direct and indirect — engendered by creation of parks?

Tourists don't come to British Columbia to enjoy the sights of clear-cut logging.

Let's not forget, too, that tourism is a resource with an annual crop — not one that requires 80 or so years to reach maturity.

Irish to honor Ranjit Dillon

The call goes out for No. 5 again for Victoria Shamrocks tonight.

Not on the firing line, on which he served so well, but on the club honor roll, a place he richly deserves.

Ranjit Dillon, the longest all-time Shamrock in point of active service, now retired, will be honored between periods of tonight's Western Lacrosse Association game between the Shamrocks and Coquitlam Adanacs at Memorial Arena.

Dillon toiled for 14 years for the Irish, winning a Mann Cup ring in his swan song to add to a Minto Cup ring he received as a junior in 1962.

After filling in at times as a junior for three seasons, Dillon joined the Irish in 1966 and there wasn't a more dedicated player ever to wear the green and white.

He appeared in 366 games, scored 389 goals, had 670 assists and had only 193 minutes in penalties.

In 77 playoff contests, he scored 61 goals and had 118 assists for 179 points.

Dillon was selected rookie-of-the-year in 1966 and in his second season was named most valuable in the WLA and selected to the all-star team.

He captured the league scoring title that season with 24 goals and 71 assists. He was picked on the all-star team again in 1972 and was awarded the Maitland Trophy for best combining ability and sportsmanship in 1968, 1972 and 1975.

For the Shamrocks, the game is important in that they can tie Coquitlam for first place with a victory. Each club has three games to play. The Shamrocks are home to Burrards next week and finish the season in Nanaimo, Aug. 2. Coquitlam is at home to Nanaimo Saturday and to New Westminster July 31.

Shamrocks Kevin Alexander holds the lead in the WLA scoring race with 63 goals and 116 points with teammate Jim Lynch second with 49 goals and 99 points.

In third place, and closing ground, is Nanaimo's Brian Evans with 99 points and a leading 64 assists.

New Westminster Salmonbellies defeated Burrards 14-9 in Tuesday's action.

The sets of brothers accounted for much of the Salmonbelly scoring.

Dave and Ray Durante each had two goals. Mark Tuura had two and brother Ivan one, while Brian and Bob Tasker each had one.

Doug Hayes scored three goals to pace Burrards.

Esquimalt finishes undefeated

The regular schedule ended Monday night for the Vancouver Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League clubs with league champion Esquimalt Universal Sheet Metal and Victoria Athletics scoring wins.

Esquimalt rounded off an unbeaten season with a 13-3 victory over G and W Landscaping while Athletics, who placed in the league with seven wins and five losses, downed Saanich Metro Honda 23-17.

Esquimalt got two goals each from John Entzminger and Kim Browning and one goal and four assists from Randy Bryant.

For the Athletics, Dwayne Ferguson scored seven goals and added three assists while Robbie Clifford scored four goals and had four assists. Kevin Kennedy, Mark Shore and Bob Darraugh scored three goals each. For Saanich, it was Owen Richmond and Gerry Bell with five goals each. Gerry Vonk had four goals and five assists.

Legion tops leaders

Esquimalt Legion upset league-leading New Westminster Salmonbellies 13-7 Tuesday night in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League game at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

It was the third time this season Legion has toppled the Salmonbellies while saving a shot at a playoff berth.

Tom Woods, a pickup player, and Mike Thomas scored four goals each on visiting goaltender Ron McIsaac, who made 34 saves.

The other Esquimalt goals were scored by Terry Jay, Russ Kennedy, John Carruthers, Bruce Alexander and Dave Angrove. For New Westminster it was Bruce Cowie with three goals, Dave Thornhill with two and Terry Miller and Ross Gatensbury with a goal each.

In the Legion goal, Derek Croucher had an excellent game, making 38 saves.

Legion, which trails Coquitlam and Burnaby by three points, has three games remaining, two against Coquitlam and one against Burnaby.

Legion are at home to Coquitlam on July 29 and Burnaby on Aug. 5. They play at Coquitlam on July 30.

With Coquitlam and Burnaby tied for third, Legion needs at least two victories to have a chance at the playoffs. Coquitlanm and Burnaby each have two games in hand.

The first four teams take part in the playoffs.

Ali enters Mayo Clinic

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali has been admitted to the Mayo Clinic for a complete physical, a clinic spokesman said Tuesday.

Ali, who entered the clinic Tuesday, has said he wants a medical clearance before launching his fourth try for the championship.

Player hurt

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Mike Cubbage, third baseman for Minnesota Twins, suffered a broken nose and facial lacerations Monday night when he was struck by a ground ball in the first game of an American League baseball doubleheader with Baltimore Orioles.

Horner, the hottest hitter, doesn't want to wake up

By Canadian Press

It's a long, long way from April to July. But Bob Horner admits it's a long way from July to October, too.

When Horner, Atlanta's shaggy-blond, slightly pudgy third baseman, started the National League baseball season, it looked as though it would be a long one, indeed — batting .059, making one error after another and getting into a lengthy row with Ted Turner after the Braves' owner tried to ship him to the minors.

But he's hitting like a major leaguer now. On Tuesday night he slugged two home runs, driving in four runs to help the Braves beat Montreal Expos 7-5.

The homers brought Horner's total to 15 in his last 23 games, the 19th and 20th of the season and gave him 13 in July, two short of the major league record shared by Hank Greenberg, Joe DiMaggio and Joe Adcock.

"I don't know why," Horner said. "I just hope nobody wakes me up until the end of October.

"Honest to God, I can't say I'm doing anything different then I was on opening day. It just fell into place."

"I've never seen a hitter that hot," said Braves' manager Bobby Cox. "The hottest home-run hitter I've ever seen."

Elsewhere in the NL, Cincinnati edged Philadelphia 3-2, Houston shaded New York 6-5, St. Louis trimmed Los Angeles 3-2 and Pittsburgh nipped San Diego 4-3. In the completion of Monday's darkness-suspended game, San Francisco beat Chicago 2-0 in 15 innings, then the Cubs won the regularly-scheduled game 3-1.

Horner ripped a three-run homer in the fourth inning and a solo shot in the sixth. Both came off Montreal starter Bill Lee.

Had he ever seen anyone hit the ball the way Horner's hitting it now? Lee's brow furrowed in concentration.

"Yeah," he said. "Wagner — Honus Wagner.

"Used to play for Pittsburgh. Third baseman, too, I believe. That's the guy. Saw him in my dreams.

"Horner's seeing the ball well," Lee added, "He's got one heck of an optometrist. He's got a lot of patience for a young kid. I kept throwing him good pitches and he kept fouling them back 'til he got what he wanted."

His homers helped the Braves to a 5-3 lead, but when Horner kicked away a grounder in the eighth inning, it helped Montreal tie it. In the bottom of the inning, though, Glenn Hubbard got the winning hit off loser Stan Bahnsen, a two-run single up the middle.

Leaders top Blues

BELLINGHAM — Neither team played exactly like a title contender, but the division-leading Bellingham Mariners managed to find an edge and tripped the second-place Victoria Blues 8-6 in a Northwest League baseball game Tuesday night.

Each team committed five errors in the loosly-played contest.

David Blume cracked a two-run homer to spark Bellingham's four-run fifth inning and the winning run came with two out in the same frame when catcher Dan Firova's routine fly ball was lost in the lights.

Ellias Salva gained credit for the pitching victory.

Catcher Don Hyman and Joe Lorenz each drove in two runs for Blues.

Minor baseball playoffs

Firefighters nip rivals

Victoria Firefighters II nipped Nanaimo 6-5 in one of the opening games of the British Columbia senior Babe Ruth baseball championship tournament Tuesday at Lambrick Park.

In the other game for 16-18-year-olds, Merritt slipped past Trail, 4-3.

Dave DeVana cracked a bases-loaded single to drive in the winning run for Firefighters II, the district representative, and Clark Austin threw a six-hitter for the pitching victory. Ken Docherty connected for three hits for Nanaimo.

Ron Hume and Arni Stadler combined for a two-hitter for Merritt.

The tourney was scheduled to continue today with North Vancouver meeting Prince George this afternoon and Victoria Firefighters I, the host squad, playing a Vancouver-Coquitlam entry at 6.

In the provincial 14-15 Babe Ruth tourney at Prince George, Gordon Head Cosmopolitans struck for six runs in the first inning and then held on to down Duncan 14-7 in the opening game for both teams.

Daryn Lansdell was the winning pitcher and Cosmos now face either Trail or Nechako tonight at 6.

At Squamish, Vancouver Inter-Community dropped Gordon Head Cosmpolitans 11-9 at the provincial 13-year-old tourney.

In the Greater Victoria Little League district playoffs at Hampton Park, Darren Copley came up with a two-way effort to lead Layritz to a 12-2 win over Oak Bay.

Copley pitched a four-hitter and helped himself at the plate with a two-run homer that highlighted a seven-run fifth inning.

Dale Toronitz had three hits for Layritz.

The tourney continues tonight at 6:30 with Gordon Head meeting Triangle.

WIN A summerfunthing

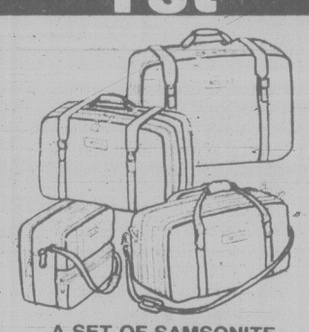
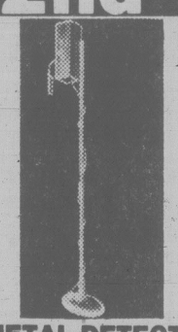
Play it daily and be eligible to win weekly prizes. It's easy and it's fun — just follow the instructions below . . .

THIS WEEK'S PRIZES

1st — A SET OF SAMSONITE LUGGAGE



2nd — A METAL DETECTOR with built-in discriminating device



3rd — DENIM BARBECUE SET Chef's apron, hat and mitts (5 sets to be won)

HOW TO PLAY

Locked inside the "SUMMERFUNTHING" safe are many valuable prizes. Some of those prizes could be yours if you find the correct PASSWORD that opens the combination lock. It's an exciting game that's fun and easy to enter. The instructions on the dial give you the position of the letters in the "SUMMERFUNTHING" PASSWORD. All you have to do is find the first letter to start. For instance, suppose you started at the letter E and the instructions read 2nd LETTER-FOUR COUNTER CLOCKWISE. Count four spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter E and you arrive at the letter A. The next instruction reads 3rd LETTER-EIGHT COUNTER CLOCKWISE, so count off eight spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter A and you arrive at the letter S. Finally the 4th letter. SIX CLOCKWISE means you count in a clockwise direction from the letter S and you arrive at the letter Y. In this example the PASSWORD is the word E-A-S-Y. To give you another clue and to add to the interest, each day's password is scrambled and you will find it at the bottom of the illustration.

GAME RULES

1. Winners will be chosen by random drawing from all valid entries. All winners must answer a skill testing question
2. Winners from the previous week will be published in the Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist
3. It is not necessary for contestants to buy the Colonist or Times to enter the SUMMERFUNTHING contest. An exact drawing of the entry form printed in the Colonist or Times may be made on a plain piece of paper. Note: copies produced by any other process will not be accepted.
4. The SUMMERFUNTHING judges will have the final decision on any interpretation of Game rules.
5. As a condition of receiving prizes, recipients agree to allow publication of their names and pictures in the Colonist or Times for no additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all rules. No prize substitutions.
6. The contest is open to all readers of the Daily Colonist and Victoria Times on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands. Employees of Victoria Press and their immediate families are not eligible to enter.
7. In fairness to all, the Colonist or Times cannot answer questions or respond to phone calls or letters regarding THE SUMMERFUNTHING CONTEST.
8. All winners will be determined by a random draw from all valid entries.

HOW TO ENTER

Complete the puzzle and fill in the "PASSWORD" on the entry form. Clip out the entry form and send it to us in an envelope with the puzzle number printed in the top left hand corner of the envelope. (As illustrated.)

Be sure to include your name, address and phone number on the entry form.

Enter as many times as you wish but make sure each entry is in a separate envelope.

Mail your entries to:

Four for four for Forland

Wayne Forland had four hits in four trips to the plate at Central Park Tuesday night as Tally Ho defeated Labatts 7-3 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game.

In Tally Ho's four-run first inning, Forland singled and scored and later in the game he and winning pitcher Larry Cole drove in two runs each.

Mel Nelson hurled a five-hitter as Victoria Athletics blanked Tod-Hackett 3-0 in the other game.

In Heywood Avenue Men's League play, Randy Epp belted three hits, including a home run, to lead Ingraham Hotel to a 6-5 win over Athletics.

Bemister's Welding moved into a tie for first place in the Victoria-Saanich Woemn's League by downing Tillicum Shoppers Drug Mart 9-0 at Yyacinth Park.

It was the 13th victory in 15 games for winning pitcher Marilyn Bolton, who threw a three-hitter.

For the winners, Sherry Thorteinson and Terry Crocker had two hits and drove in two runs each.

Bemisters are now tied with Island Dryco Breakers with 17-2-2 records.

Mavis Underwood was the winning pitcher as Butler Brothers beat MacDonald Furniture 6-0 in the other game.

Mayfair downed Trafalgar 9-5 and Coast Projects coasted by Saints 12-4 in Macdonald Park Men's League games.

And in the Lower Island Softball Association intermediate "B" women's league, Victoria Firefighters and Lakehill Meats battled to a 12-12 tie.

Connor's Freedom runs streak to 17

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Unstoppable Dennis Conner stretched his unbroken winning streak to 17 races Tuesday by sailing Freedom to another victory over Russell Long's Clipper in America's Cup observation trials.

The San Diego skipper has dominated the 12-metre racing on Rhode Island Sound in two sets of trials against Long and Ted Turner, the successful Cup defender in 1977.

One of the three United States skippers will be chosen by the New York Yacht Club, sponsor of the sailing trials, to defend the America's Cup against a foreign challenger in September.

Conner topped Long, 24, by one minute, 14 seconds after forcing his rival across the starting line early, then widening his advantage over the course.

Conner's only loss came at the hands of Turner in the opening match of the preliminary trials last month.

The observation series continues through July 30, but the American skippers will meet again in selection trials Aug. 19.

Guterrez trap champ

Miro Guterrez emerged with the high over-all title at the annual Don Clare Memorial trap shoot of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association.

Other winners were Duncan Haydon, Jim Chaplin, Joe Mayar, Bert Thomas, Gord Cumming and Leo Pike.

Quebec policeman holds fourth place

BISLEY, England (CP) — Alain Marion, the Luskville, Que., police officer who has been up among the leaders throughout the Bisley rifle meeting, dropped back a few points Tuesday in the over-all rating.

With eight of the 10 major events completed he is holding fourth position

Marion has collected 407 points of a possible 425, putting him five points behind the leader, last year's grand aggregate winner, Arthur Clarke of the British Army Target Rifle Club.

But there is still the first stage of the Queen's Prize to come, always a difficult shoot, and the tricky Duke of Gloucester competition, which calls for 15 shots at 600 yards.

Marion is the only Canadian with a chance of getting into the top five or six of the championship.

Summerhays retains title

HALIFAX (CP) — Gary Summerhays fought his way past a tenacious attack by challenger Roddy MacDonald of New Waterford, N.S., to retain his Canadian light-heavyweight boxing title Tuesday.

Dr. Wayne Gorman stopped the fight before the seventh round when Summerhays, of Brantford, Ont., opened a nasty cut on MacDonald's right eye in the sixth.

Until then, MacDonald appeared to have a good chance at stopping the experienced champion as he used an effective short left to repeatedly tag Summerhays.

In the fourth, MacDonald landed a hard left to the the champion's head and Summerhays staggered backward. The challenger dove forward, unleashing a stinging series of combinations and Summerhays had to backpeddle to stay in the fight.

But MacDonald couldn't put Summerhays away in the fourth, and the champion fought back to an even round in the fifth and regained his composure.

In the sixth, Summerhays went head-hunting and started to score with a tricky left hook and a looping right lead. Midway through the round, a splash of blood appeared on MacDonald's eyelid and although he fought to the end of the round, doctors would not allow him to continue to the seventh.

Opening lead — queen of clubs.

When Sylvia first joined the club, she barely knew a spade from a hole in the ground. She thought a coup was something the birds did, a pass something the boys made at girls, and a double something you saw in the mirror.

But this didn't stop Sylvia from playing in the expert game, where of course she was outclassed. Her unfamiliarity with the niceties of the game was at times shocking and produced countless disasters, but at the same time this very ignorance occasionally resulted in an outstanding triumph that would be discussed by the membership at large for weeks on end.

Take this deal which occurred shortly after Sylvia learned to finesse. This newly found device was a revelation to her, and she relished each and every opportunity to use it with an unholy zest that scared her partners half to death.

West led a club. Sylvia won in dummy with the ace, returned a trump, and finessed the jack! When this extraordinary play succeeded, Sylvia's expression of joy would have melted the heart of the Sphinx. She later lost a heart, a diamond and a club, but made four spades.

East-West felt deeply aggrieved by the unusual trump finesse, without which Sylvia inevitably would have gone down one. Yet, strangely enough, later analysis proved that Sylvia's play was correct and the only way to assure the contract.

Had the finesse lost to the singleton or doubleton queen, the contract would still have been firmly under control. The defense could cash a club and shift to a diamond, but declarer would win, cash a high trump, and play a heart to the queen and ace. South would then be able to discard a diamond on the king of hearts, using the three of spades as a sure-fire entry to dummy.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J.A.H. HUNTER

"That's Mike, our eldest. You'll meet his sister Susie this evening," Jim declared. "They're both teenagers."

Conor smiled. "A warning or a promise? How old is she?"

Jim chuckled. "You used to like problems, so there's one for you," he replied. "The sum of their ages is a prime number, as is their difference, and the sum of those two primes in a perfect square."

How old was Susie?

Thanks to C. McNally, Carrick-on-Shannon, Eire.

Appeal gets Bouvier reduced suspension

By BILL WALKER

While owner-trainer-driver Joe Hudon will have to wait until next month to have his appeal heard on a fine and suspension levied last week, trainer-driver Jean Marc Bouvier has had a five-year suspension reduced to one year by the B.C. Racing Commission.

Leading driver at Sandown Raceway, Hudon was fined $250 and suspended 15 days for a positive test on the three-year old B.C. Cinder in the 10th race at Sandown, July 10.

Hudon has denied all guilt and has been granted a stay pending the appeal which will be heard when the commission can get all parties concerned, and the information, laboratory reports, etc., together.

Bouvier, one of seven people suspended last December after a race was fixed at the Cloverdale Raceway, was originally found in violation of eight rules of racing and suspended five years.

The commission allowed the appeal of all but one, which had charged him with giving false information or refusing to give requested information to the judges and their representative.

Bouvier, also an owner, will be eligible to apply for a new licence Dec. 26, 1980. Bouvier was the only accused who had any success while appealing charges.

Douglas Booth, an owner who was suspended indefinitely with the recommendation that his licence be revoked for two years, lost his appeal bid. However, the proposed penalty will not be imposed because he co-operated with the commission during its investigation and hearings.

He now is eligible to apply for a new licence.

The charges came as a result of an incident which occurred in the 10th race at Cloverdale Nov.5.

Drivers Roger Provencher, Rene Bourgeois and Bouvier were the most severely penalized following the incident.

Provencher, who finished fifth with the favorite Lebret, was suspended seven years. Bourgeois, who placed sixth with the second favorite, Claybrook Barry, was handed a five-year suspension, the same as Bouvier, who finished fourth with fourth-favorite B.C. Canada.

The three horses in question had been selected 1-2-3 on the morning line.

The race was won by Game Gent, an 11-1 longshot and the triactor payoff was $856.

Two other drivers who did not take part in the race — Sten Ericsson and Doug Ferguson — were suspended 30 days and fined $1,500 for benefitting from knowledge of the fixed race and not co-operating with the judges during the investigation.

Both Ericsson and Ferguson were granted stays in January and allowed to carry on. They had paid their fines and served 13 days of their suspensions. They are now serving the remaining 17 days of their suspensions, beginning yesterday.

Tuesday at Sandown, Betty Dauber, a five-year old brown mare, trained and driven by Bob Cameron, went wire-to-wire in the 10th in her first start to set up the lowest triactor of the meeting $53.20.

A four-horse and driver spill marred the second race when Dustys Rambler, driven by Jim Eaton, appeared to break down as the field was entering the stretch for the first time.

None of the drivers — Jim Eaton, Dave Smith, Mike Stymest, Marko Vukulich — were injured.

Joan slips, but holds lead

First-round leader Joan Lawson of Uplands was one of the victims of high winds Tuesday but still managed to stay on top heading into today's final round of the 54-hole British Columba senior women's golf championship tournament at Victoria Golf Club.

Lawson, the 1979 runner-up, carded a 13-over-par 87 to go with her opening-round 80 for 167 and a three-stroke lead over Lorraine MacKenzie and Anna-May Taylor, both of Vancouver.

In fourth place was defending-champion Colleen McCullough of Vancouver at 171 while Ina Guile of Chase was fifth with 172.

MacKenzie, McCullough and Guile were among the few players to improve on their opening-round scores under heavy winds.

MacKenzie had the low score of 82 while McCullough carded 84 and Guile shot 83.

Third round of the 54-hole tournament gets under way today. Sixty competitors representing 27 golf clubs are participating in the event.

B.C. Open grows bigger . . . better

Bigger and better than ever — that's the promise of the 1980 British Columbia Open golf championship tournament Sept. 10-14 at Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club.

Organizers said at a press conference Tuesday the event will be expanded to 72 holes from 54 for the first time and this time around will boast a guaranteed prize fund of $30,000.

In addition, some big names are expected.

Glen Meadows professional Bill Penny announced Stan Leonard will play in the pro-am and that Dan Halldorsen of Brandon would be back to challenge defending-champion Jim Rutledge of Victoria.

But the organizers were coy about dropping their biggest name.

"We have a celebrity coming from Los Angeles — from the Hollywood area. He's formerly a scratch golfer and his presence should bring a lot of ladies to the golf course," said Barry Shaefer of the B.C. Professional Golf Association.

The name of the mysterious guest will be announced at a later date.

Highways TNT theft linked to explosions

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — RCMP believe dynamite stolen from a ministry of highways storage shed last May may have been used in at least two explosions that rocked this northeastern community last month.

A police spokesman said it is not certain what caused explosions at an elementary school and a bulk oil plant, because of lack of evidence, but laboratory tests have shown dynamite was involved in explosions that caused about $450,000 damage to a jewelry store and power pole.

VDTs pass radiation test

TORONTO (CP) — Video display terminals at The Star — feared to have caused birth defects to children of four women who worked at them — showed negligible amounts of radiation when tested Tuesday, a ministry of labor spokesman said.

Forty-nine terminals in the newspaper's classified advertising and production departments were tested for possible radiation leaks at the request of the Southern Ontario Newspaper Guild.

The video display terminals are used by newspapers for electronic writing and editing, displaying stories on a screen similar to a television. Airlines and stockbrokers use similar devices.

John Brooks, director of communications for The Star, said all 240 terminals at the paper will be tested.

"We are most anxious to allay the concerns of anyone who works with any sort of terminal in the building," Brooks said. "The ministry's findings only confirm The Star's own position that no link appears to exist between birth defects and the use of video display terminals."

Of the children born to The Star employees between October and December last year, one has club feet, one a cleft palate, one a heart defect, and a fourth has an underdeveloped eye.

Linda Torney, a spokesman for the newspaper guild, said the union would continue to work with The Star to determine if there were common factors in the women's histories that could have caused the defects.

Meanwhile, in Montreal, pregnant women working at The Gazette will be allowed to refuse work on the terminals until tests are conducted to ensure that machines there are not leaking radiation.

Gene Moss, a spokesman for the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health in Cincinnati, Ohio, said it was absolutely impossible for the IBM machines used by The Star to cause birth defects.

Moss said there were fears about the terminals several years ago when when four employees of a U.S. insurance firm gave birth to deformed infants. He said a complete investigation showed there was no connection.

There are an estimated 50,000 video display terminals in use in Canada and about five million in use in the U.S.

An editorial writer for the Winnipeg Free Press had a hard time believing Canada was an American ally after the chilly reception he received from the CIA while visiting Washington. David MacDonald, 41, was one of the handful of reporters from North American newspapers who attended a four-day Washington Journalism Centre seminar on America in the 1980s. Part of the program included a short, unclassified briefing at CIA headquarters in Langley for everyone — except MacDonald. No foreign nationals invited, said the CIA, because someone might spot an undercover agent walking around the compound. "I called and asked why a Canadian was being treated like an East German," MacDonald says. "I mentioned the fact that we were part of the Olympic and grain boycotts. I didn't mention the Tehran embassy thing. They told me it was just a security rule." Later, attending a soiree for congressional figures at the White House, MacDonald chatted with U.S. attorney general Benjamin Civiletti and ran into Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter — who insisted he pose with them for a picture.

Heston

A celebrity telethon that was supposed to have raised $1 million for the Richard Pryor Burn Foundation turned up short of celebrities and extremely short of pledges. The 14½-hour telethon managed to attract pledges of only $140,000, and among the celebrity no-shows for the benefit were Muhammad Ali, Alex Haley and Redd Foxx. Foxx organized the event with Sammy Davis Jr — who sent a tape instead of turning up.

Charlton Heston and Roddy McDowall went over big in North America for Planet of the Apes — but they have no fan club in Indonesia. The state TV system in Jakarta has been running the old science-fantasy piece and viewers are outraged. A flood of letters to the newspaper Kompas carp that "man is God's most perfect creature," and that "it is unbelievable that man could fall under apes' orders." Not necessarily, folks. It depends on your system of government.

A small fence collapsed as hundreds of admirers lined the streets of Prince Albert, Sask., to welcome Princess Margaret. The princess, looking fresh after a night's rest, arrived at St. Alban's Anglican Cathedral to begin the second day of her week-long tour of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

abby

Dear Abby:

I can't stand cigarette smoke, but two years ago I married a three-pack-a-day man. I knew it would be hard for Jim to give up smoking altogether, so I told him I'd appreciate it if he wouldn't smoke in our bedroom.

He promised, and for a long time he kept his promise. I finally said, "OK, Buddy, there are going to be some new rules around here. There will be no lovemaking in the same room you smoke in!"

Jim is still smoking in the bedroom.

Hungry for Love

Dear Hungry:

Give Jim another chance and remind him of his promise. Should he "forget," remind him, but never withhold sexual relations as punishment.

Dear Abby:

Heartsick Parents wrote: "Recently our 25-year-old daughter decided to follow in the ways of the time. She took to living with her boyfriend, and now they have a child. They say that marriage may or may not come later. God knows how upset and brokenhearted we have been, but we thought it best to tell our wonderful friends of many years that we were new grandparents."

Heartsick Parents' complaint was that not one of their friends had written or kept in touch since. They wrote: "How it would have helped to ease our heartache if they had responded. Do they think that we condone our daughter's lifestyle? (We do not, but we're making the best of it.)"

You replied, "wonderful friends should be supportive, loving and non-judgmental, so perhaps your friends were not so 'wonderful' after all."

Supportive, loving and non-judgmental? The parents didn't weren't.

If the new grandparents themselves admit to being "upset and heartbroken," then what can their friends say?

Frankly, if friends told me that they had unfortunately become grandparents, expressing negative feelings about the event, I'd be at a loss for words, too. And perhaps permanently.

Nevada

Dear Nevada:

Thanks for an angle I failed to see.

Dear Abby:

An acquaintance of mine sent me an invitation to their daughter's wedding. I have never met the daughter and do not plan to attend the wedding. Neither do I plan to send a wedding gift.

I feel that to ignore the invitation would be rude, so I thought I'd just send the bride and groom a nice card of congratulations.

I have asked the opinions of others about this, and have been told that sending a card with no gift would be worse than ignoring the invitation altogether. Is this true?

Acquaintance

Dear Acquaintance:

Not in my book of etiquette.

There's cold in them thar molds

Most foods prepared in molds are meant to be served cold, either as first courses, salads or desserts. While the design of a mold should be appropriate to the food it contains, most molds are quite versatile and can be used interchangeably for ice cream, aspics or mousses. However, a tall, narrow bombe glacee would not be appropriate for aspic, which would collapse under its own weight.

Metal molds are the easiest to use, because they cool evenly and quickly and release their contents easily, often with only the heat of the hands. Porcelain and ceramic molds are more difficult to handle. They warm up very slowly, and by the time the food is released it may almost be in a liquid state again.

To facilitate unmolding, a mold may be washed in cold water or painted with a light oil before the food is added (oiling is not recommended with clear aspics, because it leaves a blur on the surface). Running a knife around the edge of a mold, dipping the mold quickly into hot water or applying hot wrung-out towels to it will also help to release the chilled contents. A sharp tap may also help. Molds should be filled to the top so that the contents don't drop and break when unmolded.

Molds in which foods are cooked should be simple and flat, such as a savarin or charlotte. Cooking a fish mousse in a fish-shaped mold will cause it to overcook in the thinner tail section and undercook in the fatter body section.

Except when a dramatic architectural effect is wanted, loaf pans or metal mixing bowls make perfectly fine molds. In fact, a round-bottomed mixing bowl is exactly what is needed for some dishes, such as a cold pilaf; rice does not mold well into corners and crevices.

Molds come in hundreds of sizes and shapes, from the tiny baba to the imposing biscuit de Savoie. Materials include tin, aluminum, stainless steel, enamel, Teflon-lined enamel, glass, tin-lined steel and tin-lined copper.

"We usually find that the inexpensive ones are the most popular, says Lesley Hamill, manager of Victoria's Wooden Spoon. "They don't have to be heavy or overly-decorative — like fish, roosters . . .

"While some people are buying the fancier ones, most prefer a simple, fluted model. They are easier to use and can be dressed up with fresh garnishes."

Copper and spring form molds are high in sales at Victoria Cookshop One, where prices range from about $13 to $21 and at The Panhandler, manager Lise Watson says copper molds are still very popular, "Great for your jellied and light entertaining dishes to go with summer cold meats and such."

Marinade made simple

Since summer is the season for barbecues, it might be pointed out that the mastery of marinades — for all practical purposes, marinades and barbecue sauces are one and the same — is simplicity itself.

The three most popular marinade bases are vinaigrette sauce, ketchup and soy sauce.

The vinaigrette may be made of oil and vinegar or oil and lemon juice. It may contain red or white wine. You can vary the flavors of this marinade by adding herbs and spices such as chopped garlic, parsley, rosemary, tarragon, bay leaf, thyme and so on, according to taste and inspiration.

The classic Southern barbecue sauce is one based on ketchup blended with Worcestershire sauce, Tabasco sauce, lemon juice, chopped garlic and honey or brown sugar.

The soy marinade is of Japanese inspiration and generally contains ginger, Sherry (or better yet, the Japanese mirin) plus sugar.

Here are four basic recipes for the season:

SOY SAUCE MARINADE FOR BARBECUES (For chicken, pork and fish)

½ cup soy sauce
¼ cup dry Sherry wine
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh ginger
2 teaspoons finely minced garlic
2 teaspoons sugar
¼ teaspoon hot dried red pepper flakes

Combine all the ingredients in a mixing bowl. Stir until the sugar dissolves. Use to baste charcoal-grilled chicken, pork and fish when they are almost done.

Yield: About ¾ cup.

KETCHUP SAUCE FOR BARBECUES (For chicken, pork and beef)

1 cup ketchup
3 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon finely minced garlic
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Tabasco sauce to taste
4 tablespoons butter
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
4 thin, seeded lemon slices

Combine all the ingredients in a saucepan and bring to the boil, stirring. Use to baste charcoal-grilled meats when they are almost done.

Yield: About 1½ cups.

LEMON MARINADE FOR BARBECUES (For chicken, fish, lamb and veal)

⅓ cup fresh lemon juice
½ cup olive oil
1 teaspoon finely minced garlic
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 teaspoon oregano
6 very thin, seeded lemon slices

Put the lemon juice in a small mixing bowl. Add the oil while stirring vigorously with a whisk. Add the remaining ingredients and blend well. Use to baste charcoal-grilled chicken, fish, lamb and veal.

Yield: About 1 cup.

TARRAGON MARINADE FOR BARBECUES (For chicken, fish, lamb and veal)

¼ cup red wine vinegar
½ cup peanut, vegetable or corn oil
2 teaspoons chopped fresh tarragon
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Put the vinegar in a small mixing bowl and add the oil, beating with a wire whisk. Add the tarragon and salt and pepper to taste. Blend well. Use to baste charcoal-grilled chicken, lamb, fish and veal.

Yield: About ¾ cup.

CAT scan leads to further advances

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

The tremendous interest in the use of the CAT scan (computer axial tomography) for early diagnosis has opened new avenues for further scientific advances.

It is estimated that more than $70 billion will be spent in devising even better scanning methods in the next few years. It is said that the machines, on the drawing boards, will outdate the ones in use today.

At the present time, the cost of a routine CAT scan is high. The astronomical cost of the hardware of the machine determines the high cost. It is expected that the new machine will make it possible for a marked reduction in expense.

This decade will bring with it an upsurge of interest in these devices which can now explore almost every part of the body and reveal secrets that make possible earlier diagnosis and treatment.

Surgery for cancer of the rectal area of the lower bowel has been today's choice of treatment. In the elderly, a new approach to this problem is being tried. A group of surgeons are treating these cancers by electrocoagulation. In specially selected cases, where the cancer is small and localized, it is believed that this coagulation technique may be very effective and may avoid an extensive surgical procedure.

Although this technique is not universally accepted by all doctors involved in the treatment of cancer of the rectum, it must be considered as an additional alternative to the solution of this problem. As with all such innovative approaches, patients must not pressurize their doctors to use any new technique. The choice is dependent entirely on the judgment and the experience of each doctor, and his careful evaluation of each case.

The idea of a liver transplant was once so speculative that it was thought of as science-fiction. Today, it is actually being tried. In France, a liver was transplanted on to a dying man's liver that was inadequate because of cirrhosis.

This liver graft was inserted close to the major lobe of the man's liver. With brilliant micro-surgical techniques, the blood vessels of the donor liver were attached to those of the recipient. A major problem always, of course, is possible rejection.

It is now two years since this procedure was performed. Dr. Didier Houssin, of the Paul Brousse Hospital in France, one of the team surgeons, said, "More than 28 months after the operation, the patient is in excellent condition."

Quiche crust sometimes fails

your partner's cookbook

By MIKE McGRADY

In the past, whenever we've made a pie here, we've taken the easy way out and used a frozen crust. This drives the purists up the wall. Apparently, I couldn't have committed a greater faux pas if I had doused the main course with ketchup.

Numerous correspondents have assured me that anyone can make a pie crust. Some have sent in their own recipes, recipes usually bearing such names as "never-fail pie crust." Well, I have tried these offerings, and I am frankly wondering whether making a proper pie crust is an inherited ability.

So this time out, no guarantees. This pie recipe, the best one I know, might be called "Mike's Sometimes-Fail Pie Crust." We'll be using it for a quiche, and if I were you, I'd have some of those frozen crusts stashed in the freezer. Just in case.

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: salt, pepper, sugar, pastry flour, cider vinegar, peanut oil, olive oil, mustard, garlic salt, oregano, Worcestershire sauce, cinnamon.

The Shopping List: Bacon (one-half pound); eggs; cheese (Swiss or Gruyere, one-half pound); frozen pie crusts (just in case); lard; butter; light cream (two cups); carrots (two pounds); onions; green peppers; small can tomato soup; tomatoes (five or six); baking apples (five or six).

Prepare the Day Before: Amy's famous carrot salad. One way you can tell a dish is a real show-stopper: The cook has gotten so tired of writing out the recipe that it has been mimeographed. My friend Amy hands this one out on printed cards.

Peel the two pounds of carrots and slice them into discs. Cook in boiling water until just tender. (Caution! do not overcook.) Put the carrots in a bowl. Slice two medium-sized onions into thin rings and add them to the bowl. Cut one green pepper into strips and add that. And the can of tomato soup, undiluted. Then three-quarters of a cup of cider vinegar and one-half cup of peanut oil. A teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, a teaspoon of mustard, a half-teaspoon of salt. The recipe calls for three-quarters of a cup of sugar but I think that can be cut back. Mix well and refrigerate.

Prepare Anytime: The apple sauce. Cut the cores from six baking apples. Cut the apples into chunks and put them in a covered saucepan with a cup of water. Simmer over low heat until cooked through. Run through the blender and add sugar to taste. Just before serving, add a dash of cinnamon.

3 P.M.: One of the problems with making your own pie crust: It should be made in advance, then put back in the refrigerator for a couple of hours.

Put two cups of pastry flour in a bowl and mix in one teaspoon of salt. Mix together one-third cup of butter and one-third cup of lard. Keep some ice water off to the side.

Good cooks tell me the secret of making a perfect pie crust is to work rapidly in mixing together the flour and shortening. The recommended tools: one knife in each hand. Cut the shortening into the flour and keep doing this until it is all mixed together and has the appearance of rough cornmeal.

Sprinkle six tablespoons of the ice water over the mixture and mix that in quickly, using a fork. When it all hangs together, forming a large ball, you've done enough. Wrap it in metal foil and keep it in the refrigerator for a couple of hours.

At this point, you may want to sneak a couple of frozen pie shells from the freezer to thaw. Just in case.

5:30 P.M.: Have two nine-inch pie pans ready. Remove dough from the refrigerator and cut into two equal balls. Using a rolling pin (Danger! Dust both the rolling pin and the table with flour), roll out the balls of dough. Work from the centre out, attempting to create a flat circle about two inches wider than the pan. Put these in the pans and cut away the extra dough from the rim of the pan. Put the dough back in the refrigerator while you prepare the rest of the quiche.

Fry the bacon in a large pan over medium heat. The bacon should be cooked through but not crisp. Break it into small pieces and set to one side.

Beat three eggs lightly and mix in two cups of light cream. Also a teaspoon of salt. And a half-pound of cheese that is either grated or cut into small cubes. Preheat oven to 450 degrees.

6 P.M.: Remove the pie crusts from the refrigerator. (Caution! It's not too late to switch over to the frozen crusts — but in a minute it will be.)

Add the bacon bits to the crust. Then pour in the egg-and-cheese mixture. Pop it into the 450-degree oven for 10 minutes. Then lower temperature to 350 degrees. Bake for an additional 20 minutes or until top is brown. To test for doneness, insert a knife blade. It should come out clean, or fairly clean.

6:20 P.M.: Cut the tomatoes in half and put the halves on a cookie sheet. Sprinkle with oregano, garlic salt and a few drops of olive oil. Put the tomatoes under the broiler for just a few minutes and serve piping hot.

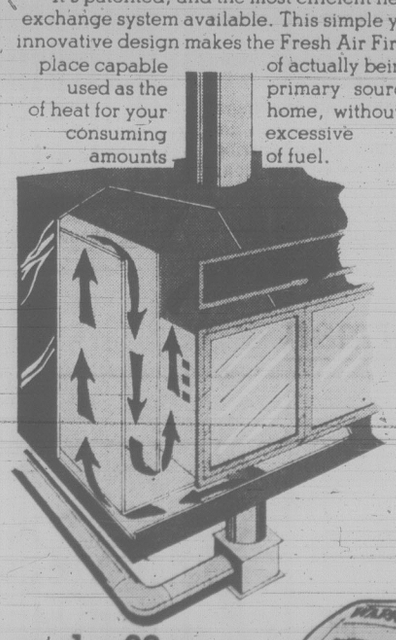
There's only FRESH AIR Fireplace... 1

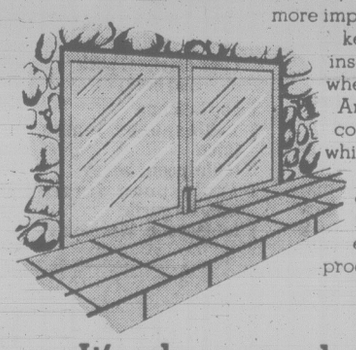
3 It comes with a triple-chamber heat exchanger...

It's patented, and the most efficient heat exchange system available. This simple yet innovative design makes the Fresh Air Fireplace capable of actually being used as the primary source of heat for your home, without consuming excessive amounts of fuel.



and 2 glass doors...

These tempered glass doors provide good visibility of the fire, of course. But, more importantly, they keep heated air inside the house, where it belongs. And with the air control dampers which supply pre-heated air for combustion, a tremendously efficient fire is produced.



It's also zero clearance.

The triple-chambered system is self-insulating, since cold air is circulated around the entire firebox. It can be located virtually anywhere, and requires no special footings. This means that installation is a do-it-yourself item.

30

That's right — the firebox is warrapted for 30 years because it is made of heavy guage stainless steel. This means that heat is transfered quickly and easily, and allows for the burning of all sorts of solid fuels.

Zucchini boats are filled with a mixture of ricotta, ham and green pepper

Low-calorie meal is garden fresh

Summer is a great time to take advantage of economical fresh vegetables and an even better time to take advantage of the low calorie dishes you can prepare using them.

Zucchini Gondolas is colorful, low-cal, and best of all, delicious. Attractive zucchini boats are filled with a mixture of ricotta, ham, and green pepper. It's an ideal way to use an abundance of zucchini which often overwhelms home gardeners, plus any leftover ham.

For added appeal, top the zucchini with an Italian-style tomato sauce. Tomato juice seasoned with an envelope of spaghetti sauce mix is the secret to the slimming sauce with an old-fashioned flavor.

Serve with a fresh fruit salad and skim milk for a nutritious lunch or supper. It's a great way to diet and enjoy it, too.

An equally tempting recipe is 10-Karat Carrots. This meatless casserole is tasty, filling, and high in vitamin A. Cheddar cheese and eggs add protein to a combination of shredded carrots and rice, while prepared mustard and nutmeg provide subtle flavor accents. Ten-Karat Carrots can be served instead of a vegetable and potato or as a main dish for lunch, accompanied by a crisp green salad.

Both recipes will help you add variety to meals while you try to whittle away the calories.

ZUCCHINI GONDOLAS

- 3 medium-size zucchini
- ½ cup ricotta cheese or cottage cheese
- ¼ cup diced ham
- ½ green pepper, chopped
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 1 envelope (1½-oz.) spaghetti sauce mix
- 1 tablespoon grated parmesan cheese
- 1 cup tomato juice

Cut zucchini in half lengthwise; scoop out centers, leaving a ¼-inch shell. Simmer zucchini shells in 1-inch water in covered pan 6 to 8 minutes, until tender-crisp. Chop zucchini centers; combine with cheese, ham, pepper, egg, and 2 teaspoons of the spaghetti sauce mix. Arrange zucchini shells in single layer in shallow baking dish; fill with cheese mixture. Sprinkle with parmesan cheese. Combine remaining spaghetti sauce mix with tomato juice; pour into pan around zucchini. Bake at 350° for 20 to 25 minutes, until filling is firm and zucchini tender. 6 servings. (Approximately 175 calories per serving).

10-KARAT CARROTS

- ½ cup long-grain brown rice for cooking
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
- 3 cups shredded raw carrots (3 to 4 carrots)
- 1 medium-size green pepper, chopped
- 1½ cups shredded cheddar cheese
- Paprika

Prepare rice. Lightly beat together eggs, milk, mustard, salt, and nutmeg. Stir in carrots, pepper, cheese, and cooked rice. Spoon into greased 1½-quart casserole. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake at 350° for 50 to 60 minutes, until slightly puffed and firm to the touch. 4 to 6 servings. (Approximately 200 calories per serving for each of 6 servings).

Cheddar always choice

Canada gained a reputation for excellent Cheddar cheese almost from the opening day of its first cheese factory (at Norwich, Ontario in 1874). By the turn of the century cheese exports had become a major consideration in the economy of the country. In 1904, a record 234 million lbs. were shipped overseas.

Over the years experimentation with new varieties such as Colby, Brick, Farmer's and Jack Cheese met with commercial success in the domestic market. Trappist monks introduced their own versions of Port Salut cheese (e.g. Oka and St. Paulin) while another order at St. Benoit du Lac, Quebec contributed a Canadian blue cheese.

Rolling pin makes large tortilla

questions & answers

Q. When I eat Mexican food at any time, I often dine on two kinds of tortillas, one made with flour, the other with cornmeal. Can you explain why the flour tortillas are almost invariably larger than those made with cornmeal?

A. What I can offer you is at best an educated guess. Traditionally, tortillas are made with a blend of cornmeal and water. When the two are blended to make a dough, small quantities of the dough, enough to be handled between the palms of the hands, are patted back and forth to make the round tortilla.

When some enterprising manufacturer decided to make a tortilla press for amateur cooks, he fashioned the discs, which press the dough, of the same diameter as would produce a standard tortilla when made between the palms.

Flour tortillas, on the other hand, are made with flour and water and rolled out with a rolling pin. Thus, these can be made of any reasonable dimension amd are generally larger than the cornmeal tortillas.

Q. When we were in Switzerland recently, we dined on truite au bleu. The trout were curled up and served with a hollandaise sauce. Can I prepare this dish at home?

A. Provided you have access to living trout. To prepare truite or trout au bleu in the classic sense, you must start off with live trout.

First, you start with a basin of boiling water to which vinegar and salt have been added. When it boils, and only then, you kill your trout quickly by striking it a blow on the head.

You eviscerate the trout as rapidly as possible and drop it into the boiling water. The immediate nerve action of the trout as it lands in the water will cause it to curl. The trout is cooked as briefly as necessary and drained. It is then served with melted butter and lemon or with hollandaise sauce.

I do know that at times some chefs who do not have access to living trout will "cheat" by tying the tail of the trout to the mouth. They cook the trout and serve it as indicated.

If you cannot find freshly caught trout, whether still alive or not, it is best not to attempt this dish. The vinegar gives the blue color to the trout and that is why it is called trout au bleu.

Q. I have a white enamel saucepan that is cracked and has a small dark spot. I know that it would be costly to have it re-enameled and I don't want to throw it out. Is it safe to use?

A. Yes. There are those who contend that, in fact, foods cooked in iron pots, saucepans or whatever, actually absorb small quantities of iron, which is good for you.

I have a friend, a fine Persian cook, who tosses a nail in one dish called fosenjohn (duck and meatballs in a walnut sauce), not for the iron content but because the iron gives dark coloration to the stew.

Let me go on record as stating that I am not encouraging the addition of nails and so on to stews. But a "black iron skillet" and a "black iron kettle" for cooking Southern greens are a part of my background.

Q. When I was a child in Texas (a good many years ago), we ate a lot of whole hominy as well as hominy grits. I recently ran across a recipe for hominy souffle in a fancy magazine and am confused. When they say "hominy," do they mean whole hominy or hominy grits? And do you know the origin of the word hominy?

A. I am glad you asked, for it is an irritating fact of life that Yankees do not comprehend that hominy connotes whole hominy in the minds of those who would use it in the first place.

Hominy grits are, to my mind — or, perhaps, I should say to my taste — redundant. Grits are made from hominy. As a Texan, you wouldn't say corn hominy for the simple reason that hominy is made from corn kernels that have been dried and then soaked in lye. In brief, however, the rerincipal ingred⅞ hummin, which means to grind corn. Don't labor the point and tell me that whole hominy isn't ground. I know it.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR
THURSDAY, JULY 24

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Abstract principles come into focus. Travel, special, long-range projects, publishing and communicaton command attention. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in "meaningful" scenario.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One close to you confides "secret" connected with budget, finances. Be diplomatic, remember resolutions concerning family harmony. Your intuitive intellect is on target. You will know what to do.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You learn where you stand as terms are defined. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. Check legal implications, rights and permissions. Focus on public relations, partnership proposals, marital status. See as is.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on fresh concepts, special services, brighter employment and health prospects. Welcome chance for greater creative freedom, added independence. One who shares basic interests pays compliment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Strike chord of universal appeal. Communicate by sharing knowledge — find familiar responses, not off-beat events. You can finish an important assignment. Aries, Libra natives figure prominently. Spotlight on physical attraction.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New approach to old dilemma brings desired results. Leo person plays key roles. Emphasis on appraisals, property, coming to terms with individual who may be ultra-conservative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Gain indicated through written word, special message. You learn where you stand with older family member. Short trip could aid in resolving differences. Hunch is on target.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-nov. 21): Don't scatter efforts: consolidate, be a comparison shopper, count your change, locate "missing link." Gemini, Sagittarius persons play major roles. Lunar emphasis on payments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Review prospects, choose quality, refuse to be intimidated, maintain confidence and self-esteem. Moon position highlights direct action, originality, initiative and knack for being at right place at crucial moment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Clandestine arrangements lend aura of romance and intrigue. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Emphasis on backstage maneuvers, secrets, your ability to be discreet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Wish comes true, but is devoid of trumpets and drum rolls. Means you get what you want but there is little or no sensationlism. Real emphasis is on security, diplomacy and chance to strengthen family ties.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have secret ally in "high place." Superior will define terms and you'll know where you stand. Accent on career, prestige, honor and reputation. Virgo and another Pisces figure prominently.

IF JULY 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, dramatic, appreciate quality, have innate charm which is sensed by members of opposite sex. You have been going through a testing period and you are ready to "break loose." In August, you'll travel, social life will accelerate, popularity will increase and holiday atmosphere will prevail. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. You are capable of dramatically illustrating beliefs — your voice and gestures command attention. You have tendency to be self-indulgent. This applies especially where diet is concerned. You could have a "sweet tooth."

Low-sodium sardines are really worth their salt

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE
New York Times

Although I was placed on a no-salt, low-sodium diet about one year ago, there were a dozen or so foods that I foreswore with a modest amount of sadness. Among them were sauerkraut, dill and garlic pickles, anchovies and sardines.

At least two of these — sauerkraut and anchovies — could never be reproduced without salt, no matter how earnest the effort. We have made a fair-to-middling batch of pickles without salt.

I was, therefore, pleased to be shipped recently a case of low-sodium sardines of assorted sizes and processing that were highly acceptable to the palate. They bear the brand name of Season, and they are from Norway and Portugal.

There are brisling sardines from Norway, which are quite small. They are packed in tomato sauce, and they are of excellent quality. There are skinless and boneless sardines and plain sardines from Portugal and these are, perhaps, a bit more tasty than those from Norway. The flavor and texture of the sardines are improved if the cans are well chilled before opening and serving.

All the sardines are prepared without oil and, with the exception of the sardines in tomato sauce, packed in water.

The sodium content of the Portuguese sardines is listed as a mere 82 milligrams; of the Norwegian, "less than 120 milligrams."

When I have eaten these sardines, I have always added a small amount of oil and a bit of lemon juice. They were even better when for a recent lunch I mashed a can of skinless, boneless sardines and blended them with a touch of unsalted homemade mayonnaise, chopped scallions, cubed tomato, lemon juice and freshly ground black pepper. I served the mixture, sandwich fashion, with unsalted, homemade French bread.

These sardines are distributed by I. Epstein & Sons Inc., and I am told by Martin Epstein that they are widely available in grocery stores and supermarkets.

The sardines may also be ordered by the case from the distributor. An order form may be obtained by writing the Season Products Corp., 34 Loretto Street, Irvington, N.Y. 07111. Sample prices for a case of 24 or 25 tins is $21.36 for the Norwegian sardines, $22.25 for the sardines from Portugal. The cost includes postage and handling charges.

Here is a recipe for one serving of a sardine salad sandwich:

SARDINE SALAD SANDWICH

1 4⅜-ounce can Portuguese skinless and boneless sardines
1 teaspoon imported or homemade unsalted mayonnaise
1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice or more to taste
1 scallion, trimmed and chopped
¼ cup red, ripe tomato cut into cubes
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1 three-inch length unsalted French bread, split in half.

1. Empty the sardines into a small mixing bowl and mash them with a fork.

2. Add the mayonnaise and lemon juice. Add the scallion, tomato and pepper. Stir lightly to blend.

3. Toast the split side of each bread half. Serve the sardine salad as a sandwich filling.

Yield: 1 serving.

Within recent weeks I went off into the shallows in defining the meaning of the word brisling as applied to sardines. I said that brisling refers to a very small herring.

Now comes a note from H. John Bessunger of the Haram-Christensen importing corporation.

"Please be advised," he writes, "that your definition is wrong. Brisling (Clupea Sprattus) is not herring but a genuine sardine."

New theory on fungus

BOSTON (AP) — Chinese people have far less heart disease than North Americans, and one doctor thinks he may have figured out why. His unlikely theory: Black tree fungus makes the difference.

The tree fungus, sometimes called tree ears, is a common ingredient of all kinds of Chinese food, but it most often turns up in Szechwan and Mandarin dishes, such as mooshi pork and hot and sour soup.

Dr. Dale Hammerschmidt of the University of Minnesota medical school discovered that this flat, rubbery, tasteless food somehow slows the natural tendency of the blood to form clots.

Cycle snack rides well

Nut-filled and energy-packed snacks

Cycling is both popular and invigorating as a sport. It is a great way to keep in shape during the summer months.

Fresh air and exercise build up the appetite, so take along a high energy snack. Since cumbersome ice packs are a must for perishable foods, pack a light snack, not easily squashed or spoiled.

Energy Plus Bars are nutritious and satisfying. Chock full of nuts and raisins, this bar is perfect to munch during a cycling break.

If you are a peanut butter fan, try Crunchy Peanut Butter Bars. Note that peanut butter is perfectly safe to carry in hot weather.

ENERGY PLUS BARS

- ¾ cup margarine
- 1⅓ cup corn syrup
- 1 egg
- 1 (6½ ounce) can frozen orange juice concentrate
- 1 cup instant skim milk powder
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 cup wheat germ
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 1 cup raisins

Grease 13 x 9 x 2-inch baking pan. Stir margarine to soften in large bowl. Beat in corn syrup and egg until smooth. Stir in orange juice. Add powdered milk, flour, wheat germ, baking soda, cinnamon and nutmeg. Stir until well mixed. Fold in nuts and raisins. Spread mixture in pan. Bake at 350°F 45 minutes or until richly browned. Cool. Cut into 36 (1½ x 2-inch) bars.

CRUNCHY PEANUT BUTTER BARS

- 250 mL all-purpose flour
- 5 mL baking powder
- 175 mL Old fashioned or chunk peanut butter
- 75 mL margarine
- 175 mL corn syrup
- 2 eggs
- 5 mL vanilla
- 125 mL raisins

Grease 24 x 24 x 5 cm baking pan. In small bowl stir together flour and baking powder. In large bowl, with mixer at medium speed, beat together peanut butter and margarine. Gradually add corn syrup, beating until smooth. Beat in eggs, one at a time, then vanilla. Stir in flour mixture until well blended. Add raisins. Spread in pan. Bake in 180°C (350°F) oven 30 minutes. Cool. Cut into 24 (6 x 3 cm) bars.

Spud shunners take note

Shed a tear for the lowly spud. It has fed rich and poor alike around the turies. But now many of us shun it.

Why? Dieters, especially, thinks it's fattening. Yet food consultants at the Food Advisory Division, Agriculture Canada, point out that a medium potato baked in its skin for example, supplied abound 90 calories, no more than 250 mL of skim milk.

In addition, the potato is an inexpensive vegetable which supplies vitamin C. Cooked in its jacket, the spud provides at least 50 per cent of the vitamin C needed daily. It also supplies folic acid, thiamin and fibre.

It's true that potatoes contain starch, or carbohydrate, say the food consultants, but then so do many other vegetables, fruits, breads, cereals — all necessary to a well-balanced diet. For example, a serving of 125 mL of drained, canned, green peas or canned peaches, packed in water, contains about 10 grams of carbohydrate, half the amount found in a potato baked in its skin.

Watching your weight shouldn't make mealtime dull. Eat a varied and well-balanced diet every day. And think twice next time before you refuse that potato — help support the spud. Of course, in this case, it's best to choose a baked or a boiled potato.

For those of you who don't have to watch calories as closely as others, try this recipe for "Scalloped Potatoes with Cottage Cheese". and at the same time, sharpen up your metric cooking skills.

SCALLOPED POTATOES WITH COTTAGE CHEESE

- 25 mL margarine
- 25 mL flour
- 10 mL salt
- 1 mL pepper
- 50 mL skim milk powder
- 115 mL water
- 375 mL cottage cheese
- 1½ L thinly sliced potatoes
- 125 mL chopped onion

Melt margarine. Blend in flour, seasonings and skim milk powder. Gradually add water and cottage cheese. Stir and cook until smooth and thick. Add potato and onion. Bring to boil. Turn into greased 2 L baking dish. Bake covered at 180° C until sauce returns to boil (abut 45 Min.). Uncover and continue baking until potatoes are tender (about 45 Min. more). 6 servings.

Varieties of sole can cause confusion for chef

the 60-minute gourmet

I doubt that there is anything more confusing in the North American kitchen than the various kinds of fish that are sold over the counter as sole. When one speaks of sole in France or England, one almost invariably means that fine fish that comes from the English Channel and is known in England as Dover sole and in France as sole de La Manche. There is, to my mind, no sole found anywhere to equal it.

But consider the kinds of fish sold as sole in this country. In The Encyclopedia of Fish by A. J. McClane (Holt, Rinehart & Winston, 1977), the author lists butter sole, curlfin sole, lemon sole, rex sole, rock sole, sand sole and so on. Not to mention gray sole and yellow sole.

In the McClane book, there is a special section on flounder, which is also known as sole in North America. And it was of special interest to me to learn that the fish that is known as fluke in America is actually summer flounder. This fish averages from three to five pounds but sometimes grows to a weight of 15 or 20 pounds.

To my taste, fluke is one of the finest of fish to be found in domestic waters in spring or summer. Fluke has an excellent texture and I prefer it when it is slightly thick. I found two fillets that weighed about one pound each.

I cooked them with a Provencale sauce, which is the French equivalent of what is known as a Creole sauce in Louisiana. I spooned the quickly made sauce into a baking dish and placed the fillets on top. They fit the dish compactly. The fillets were topped with a blend of bread crumbs, parsley and garlic and the total baking time was 15 minutes.

This is a dish that I would normally serve with buttered rice or a steamed potato, but on this occasion I served it with buttered bulghour, or cracked wheat. It made an excellent accompaniment and cooked in the same time that it took to bake the fish once it was placed in the oven.

FILLETS de FLUKE PROVENCALE

(Fluke fillets with tomato and green pepper sauce)

2 skinless, boneless fillets of fluke, about 2 pounds
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
4 tablespoons olive oil
2 cups thinly sliced onions
1½ teaspoons finely minced garlic
2 cups thinly sliced mushrooms
1 green pepper, cored, seeded and thinly sliced, about 1 cup
½ cup dry white wine
1¾ cups skinned, seeded tomatoes cut into half-inch cubes
1 bay leaf
¼ cup fine fresh bread crumbs
¼ cup finely chopped parsley

1. Preheat the oven to 425 degrees.

2. Sprinkle the fish with salt and pepper to taste. Set aside.

3. Heat half of the oil in a deep, small skillet and add the onions and one-half teaspoon garlic. Cook briefly and add the mushrooms and green pepper. Cook about one minute.

4. Add the wine, tomatoes and bay leaf and bring to the boil. Add salt and pepper to taste. Cook, stirring occasionally, about 15 minutes.

5. Select a baking dish large enough to hold the fish in one layer. It may be necessary to split the fish down the center to accommodate them in phe dish. We used a dish measuring about 9 by 15 inches that was two inches deep. Spoon the tomato sauce over the bottom of the dish. Smooth it over. Arrange the fish fillets on top of the sauce.

6. Brush the fish with the remaining oil.

7. Combine the bread crumbs, parsley and remaining one teaspoon of garlic. Sprinkle this over the fish.

8. Place the fish in the oven and bake 15 minutes.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

BULGHOUR PILAF
(Cracked Wheat Pilaf)

2 tablespoons butter
½ cup finely chopped onion
1 cup bulghour
2 cups chicken broth
Salt to taste
2 tablepsoons finely chopped parsley

1. Melt the butter in a saucepan and add the onion. Cook until wilted.

2. Add the bulghour, broth and salt. Bring to the boil and cover.

3. Let simmer 15 minutes. Uncover and stir in the parsley.

Yield: 4 servings.

Gulp! Provincial frustration tough to swallow

By GARY KINGSTON

VANCOUVER (CP) — Saskatchewan Attorney-General Roy Romanow literally took matters into his own hands Tuesday to show reporters how the provinces will have to convince federal Justice Minister Jean Chretien to make some concessions at the constitutional negotiations.

Asked at a news conference how he could get the chief federal negotiator to alter Ottawa's position on the contentious issue of trade and commerce powers, Romanow leaned over and pretended to throttle the startled minister.

"Just like this," he laughed. "That's how."

The episode at the daily media briefing was good-natured fun, but Romanow's action clearly reflects the provincial negotiators' growing frustration at the federal government's refusal so far to make any tradeoffs or compromises.

Romanow, co-chairman of the summer-long talks now into their third week, said today's crucial discussion on the federal government's power over the economy proposals will be a key to determining if any substantial progress can be made.

"I think we have to make progress, we have to make movement here in Vancouver," he said. "I continue to hold the point of view that the powers over the economy provision . . . holds the key to movement."

Ottawa, backed only by Ontario, wants the power in a new constitution to prevent the provinces from restricting the flow of goods, capital and labor across the various provincial boundaries.

Chretien said he is optimistic that at least a partial solution can be reached, noting that some provincial delegations told a committee discussing the issue Tuesday that they might accept such a power in a revised constitution if it were to take a different form.

"I said fine, if you have a better mechanism than mine, I'm willing to look at it and, if it's a good one, I'll buy it," he said.

Romanow said, however, he doubts Chretien — who maintains he's the "most flexible guy in town" — is at a stage where he's ready to move.

"I don't sense that kind of a trading-off mood yet," he said.

Another major negotiating stalemate — the provinces' desire to keep control of natural resources including those off-shore — will be discussed today in a special meeting attended only by the ministers from each province.

"We'll be going into a suite where we can be closer to each other and we can read right into the middle of the eyes of the guy," Chretien said.

No major breakthroughs have been achieved, but Romanow and Chretien said a consensus has been reached on at least four of the less controversial topics — family law, the Supreme Court of Canada, equalization payments and reform within Canada's Senate.

Romanow said the fact that the negotiators have not been able to reach a consensus on the major topics is not yet a cause for panic, but is a cause for concern.

Sask. supports Alta. oil stand

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan's New Democrat government put Western unity above party unity Tuesday, giving Peter Lougheed timely support as the combative — and Conservative — Alberta premier headed into crucial negotiations with Ottawa.

Playing down his philosophic distaste for increasing oil company profits, Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney emerged from a two-hour meeting with Lougheed to declare solidarity with Alberta on oil prices.

Blakeney told a news conference "wellhead prices must increase more quickly than in the past. The increases must be in significant and measured steps towards world levels and must rapidly reach levels sufficient to bring on more local Canadian oil supplies."

Lougheed, who meets Prime Minister Trudeau in Ottawa on Thursday for oil-price negotiations, listened smilingly as Blakeney endorsed other key Alberta points.

Among Blakeney's declarations:

—Revenue from oil price increases must be largely directed into developing new oil supplies, not siphoned off by Ottawa to prop up general federal deficit spending.

—Trudeau should not offer any less to oil-producing provinces than former prime minister Joe Clark did.

—The existing federal tax on oil exports and a suggested similar tax on natural gas exports violate provincial rights to sell such resources abroad.

Missing girl's fate a mystery

MILTON, Ont. (CP) — The parents of a 14-year-old Canadian girl who disappeared while on a family vacation in Mexico in February are considering hiring a private detective to help authorities in their search, the girl's mother said Tuesday.

Frances Sweet said she has written a personal letter to Mexican President Lopez Portillo requesting help in finding her daughter, Catherine, who vanished near San Miguel de Allende on Feb. 4. But so far she has received no reply.

She said her family is growing desperate for an answer to the disappearance, but they fear that the pressure of missing person posters might frighten Catherine's captors into hiding her more securely or physically harming her.

Jesse Zuest, a Milton psychic the family consulted, has said she believes the girl is being confined, perhaps tied up, and may be under the influence of drugs, said Mrs. Sweet.

The psychic also suggested a search be concentrated near the Mexican border around a town with the name containing the word, Anna.

Mrs. Sweet said she is reluctant, however, to try telling police to search such an area on such non-scientific reasoning.

Milton is 20 kilometres east of Guelph.

Strikes sweep Alta. as workers rebel

EDMONTON (CP) — Six illegally striking jail guards found guilty Tuesday of civil contempt of court for ignoring a back-to-work injunction were to be sentenced in Court of Queen's Bench today in Edmonton.

The six were the first of 15 guards served with contempt of court notices by the Alberta government after 1,000 striking jail guards and 186 Liquor Control Board warehouse workers — all members of the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees — refused to obey a court injunction issued two weeks ago ordering them to back to work. Their contract expired March 31.

The convicted guards face a possible jail term and fines of up to $1,000 each.

The decision by William Sinclair, chief justice of the Alberta Court of Queen's Bench, came amid growing signs of violence as wildcat strikes by provincial employees throughout Alberta since July 2 continued in defiance of provincial anti-strike legislation.

Early Tuesday, five striking employees at the Alberta Liquor Control Board warehouse in Calgary were attacked by four men armed with clubs who drove through picket lines, scattering the workers and injuring one man, said union negotiator Gilles Bourgeois. Police confirmed his report.

Meanwhile, strikes by about 3,000 government clerical workers, off the job since late last week, spread Tuesday as some 400 employees at the Treasury Branch vehicle registration offices in Edmonton joined the picket lines.

In other strike action, the Alberta brewery industry was shut down Tuesday as companies began locking out workers. The lockout notices against Molson's in Edmonton, Carling O'Keefe in Calgary and Sick's in Lethbridge became effective today. Beer workers at Labatt's in Edmonton and Alberta Brewers' Agents employees in Edmonton and Calgary struck last week.

Phil Ponting, president of Edmonton's Molson's local, said Tuesday if there is no settlement within two weeks it could mean "a long, long total shutdown" for the third consecutive summer.

Whaling policy defended

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada did not support a moratorium on whaling because it thinks some species of whales can withstand a limited hunt but it has no plans to allow a resumption of commercial whaling in its 200-mile fishing zone, Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said Tuesday.

LeBlanc told reporters that scientific evidence shows "that certain stocks can safely sustain a limited hunt."

Canada voted with eight other countries to oppose a whaling moratorium at meetings of the International Whaling Commission in England. The vote blocked the moratorium.

The move has been sharply condemned by conservationists who warn that whales might be extinct in 10 years if commercial whaling is not soon stopped.

2.4M days lost in '80

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 2.4 million days of work were lost in the first quarter of 1980 due to strikes and lockouts, Labor Canada reported Tuesday.

This was an increase from the same period last year in which nearly 1.7 million days were lost, the department said in a news release.

MPs head home for summer recess

By NORMA GREENAWAY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons sputtered to a halt early today, about 40 hours before Prime Minister Trudeau and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed are to meet here for crucial oil-pricing talks.

As MPs headed home after 66 days of Commons' sittings, there was some regret among opposition members that Trudeau will be spared a grilling in the House over the outcome of those negotiations Thursday.

However, as the first session of Parliament since the new Liberal government was elected Feb. 18 drew to an anti-climatic close, natural gas, rather than oil, dominated the final hours of debate.

After a lot of behind-the-scenes wrangling among party House leaders, the New Democratic Party abandoned its protest over the government's decision to approve early construction of the southern Canadian sections of the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline. The NDP move had prevented MPs from beginning their summer recess Friday, as the government had proposed.

The party accepted a government offer to end its protest with a vote on an NDP motion saying the so-called prebuild should not go ahead without firm financing guarantees for the entire pipeline or promises from the U.S. that the gas Canada will export through it can be replaced if necessary at the same price with gas from Alaska once the whole line is completed.

New Democrats, who saw the resolution go down to defeat 153 to 28, knew the motion was doomed in light of the Liberals solid majority in the Commons but were satisfied public attention had at least been focused on the issue for two full days. And the early-morning vote did attract all but 100 MPs.

Opposition MPs also were aware of their limited role in the oil negotiations, which are aimed at setting a new domestic price before the current agreement expires Aug. 1.

"In terms of reaching an agreement, it's the government that has to carry the can, not Parliament," William Jarvis, Progressive Conservative energy critic, said in an interview.

"All we can do is try to muster public opinion," said the MP for Perth, Ont. "To try to muster public opinion in the third week of July is pretty difficult."

Jarvis said that although he would have liked the Commons to continue sitting so he could have a crack at Trudeau on Friday, there are limits to what can be accomplished in a 40-minute daily question period. The motion to recess would have been the only business that would have been debated even if the House was still sitting.

However, as opposition MPs trekked out of the Commons for their three-month break, they were disgruntled with more than just the Liberals' energy policies.

They said the government had made a mockery of its promise for "action now" in the throne speech, read at the opening of Parliament April 14.

There was still no sign of a budget or that the government was responding adequately to the regional aspirations of Western or Atlantic Canada, they said. It had concentrated so heavily on the Quebec referendum on sovereignty-association, it had neglected the legitimate demands and concerns of the rest of Canada.

In the three months of sittings, the government introduced 49 pieces of legislation, but only 25 received royal assent and became law before the recess, including a bill to make O Canada the official national anthem.

Major legislation approved includes:

— An increase of $35 a month in the guaranteed income supplement to Canada's poorest pensioners — one of the Liberals' main promises from the Feb. 18 election.

— Improved pensions to war veterans and extension of benefits to more widows and dependent children of veterans.

— A bill regulating the movement by sea, rail and air of hazardous goods, considered urgent because of recent near-disasters such as the derailment last fall in Mississauga, Ont., of a train carrying chlorine gas.

— Access for fishermen, farmers and small businessmen to larger loan guarantees from the federal government.

Most of the bills, however, were housekeeping measures hanging around from previous administrations as a result of a tumultuous year featuring two elections and two changes of government.

With many of these measures out of the way, the Liberals are promising a busy Commons sitting this fall as MPs get a chance to delve into new legislation, such as a long-awaited freedom-of-information bill and a law to change the post office into a Crown corporation.

Among other things, the government has promised legislation to give the Foreign Investment Review Agency more power, to ease penalties for simple possession of marijuana and to amend internal discipline procedures under the RCMP Act.

The government also must grapple with how to proceed on the recommendations of the final report of a royal commission investigating alleged RCMP illegal activities. The report is expected this summer.

Meningitis attacks cited

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Large outbreaks of aseptic meningitis, a usually mild illness, occurred in Saskatchewan, Ottawa and San Antonio, Tex., last year, the U.S. Centre for Disease Control reported.

More than 80 cases were reported in Saskatchewan and about 70 cases in metropolitan Ottawa, the CDC said.

The disease is different from meningococcal meningitis, an acute bacterial disease which affects the brain and can cause death.

Fire ravages holiday hotel

CASTRIES, St. Lucia (AP) — The Canadian-owned St. Lucian Hotel, one of the largest tourist facilities on this eastern Caribbean island, was severely damaged by a fire Monday night.

Authorities estimated the damage at $750,000. The hotel is owned by Sun Tours of Toronto.

THREE CUTE KITTENS to good homes. FREE. Will deliver. Phone xxx-xxxx.

I found good homes for three kittens. And it's not easy even to give away cats, as many of you will know. Mind you, I used a little psychology. The ad, as you'll see, said "Will deliver" which meant we could, by taking them to the homes ourselves, check people out and see whether we felt comfortable leaving the kittens there. Do you know, we had forty phone calls off that ad during the three days it was in the daily papers! You can't beat that.

Individuals shine through at festival concert

By AUDREY JOHNSON

One of the most interesting factors in Tuesday's Victoria International Festival concert, aside from its virtuosity, was the well defined individuality expressed by the three pianists involved.

This was the first of three "keyboard opulence" programs which will occupy alternate Tuesdays at the McPherson Playhouse.

A classical opening was provided by Bela Siki with Mozart's Sonata in B flat Major K.333. And while the pure musicality of this work seemed somewhat isolated in the following flood of later romanticism and pianistic hyperbole, it highlighted Siki's exquisitely detailed and affectionate artistry.

Siki's touch is perfect for Mozart; clear, silken-smooth, magically fluent and even in passage work, the dynamics always exactly proportioned. His phrasing has the clarity, grace and rationale of fine sculpture. The gleaming vitality of the two outer movements surrounded a lyrically pensive, finely colored andante cantabile.

Robin McCabe provides us with the satisfying phenomenon of intellectual musicianship linked to a powerful and authoritative technical command. This in turn is governed by an artistry that is basically instinctive but richly cultivated.

One of the Festival's most popular figures, she has already demonstrated her comprehensive and resourceful gifts in the Festival's first week. The glowing pianistic riches of the Verdi-Liszt Concert Paraphrase from "Rigoletto" suited her well both from the highly lyrical and virtuoso content.

Her contribution to the evening provided unique interest by the inclusion of two Chopin Etudes — the Op.10 No. 6 and Op.10 No. 5 — side-by-side with famous virtuoso Leopold Godowsky's paraphrases of the same works. These exploitations, in the case of the No. 6 for the left hand alone, and for No. 5 a reversal of the melody, were brilliantly played.

The authority, power and versatility of Ruth Laredo never ceases to amaze. This remarkable young woman was heard last week shaping her arresting musical gifts to the role of ensemble pianist, virtually at a moment's notice, to a performance of the Schubert B flat Trio with Jean-Jacques Kanterow and Philippe Muller.

Tuesday, she capped a warm and moving performance of Rachmaninoff Preludes and Moment Musical, with a blazing rendition of Ravel's La Valse. One of the most outrageously difficult works for piano in the 20th century, La Valse explores and exploits every facet of a pianist's technique.

The bravura of Laredo's performance brought to it everything she has in the way of huge tone, corruscating runs, passionate rhythmic character (including an overly percussive right foot on the pedal).

Tonight's concert at St.Michael's University School will consist of Canadian contemporary music performed by a University of Victoria ensemble. The composers to be heard are Derek Healey, Jim Hiscott, Anthony Genge and Christopher Butterfield. The program will be recorded by the CBC.

Calgary Sun editor named

TORONTO (CP) — Les Pyette, senior assistant managing editor at The Sun, has been appointed editor-in-chief of the Calgary Sun, which was bought by the Toronto Sun Publishing Corp. in June.

Douglas Creighton, publisher of the Toronto newspaper, said the purchase of the former Calgary Albertan from Thomson Newspapers Ltd. becomes effective July 31 and the name will be officially changed to the Calgary Sun.

The first edition of the Calgary paper will hit the streets Aug. 3.

INTRODUCING

THE DENTAL CARE PLAN OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

On January 1st, 1981, British Columbia will introduce the most comprehensive public dental care program in Canada.

Designed to bring basic dental services to those who need it most, and can afford it least, the plan will provide coverage for over 900,000 British Columbians. It'll cost $85 million the first year, but that's a practical investment in dental health care for the people of this province, particularly for the more than 400,000 children who will be covered.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE

- Dependent children 14 years of age and under.
- All old-age pensioners.
- Those whose Medical Services Plan premiums are paid by the Ministry of Human Resources, and their dependents.
- Those who receive premium assistance from the Medical Services Plan, and their dependents.

There are no premiums to pay. You are automatically covered if you are in one of the above groups and are presently registered under the Medical Services Plan. If you're not registered, you should write to Dental Care Plan of B.C., P.O. Box 1500, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3G8.

BENEFITS

Our new Dental Care Plan will pay up to $700 a year per person for basic dental services available from general practice dentists, and for dentures. These services include check-ups, X-rays, cleaning, fluoride treatment for children, fillings, extractions, root canals, gum and bone treatment, and denture repairs. Full dentures provided by a dentist or licenced dental mechanic will be covered, as well as partial dentures provided by a dentist.

The plan will also pay 100% of a once yearly preventive care package for children 14 years of age and under.

OUT-OF-PROVINCE COVERAGE

If you are covered by the Plan, you will be entitled to dental benefits in an emergency anywhere outside British Columbia.

You will be reimbursed for the amount the Plan would have paid if the treatment had been given in British Columbia.

More detailed information on the Dental Care Plan will be published prior to the introduction in January, 1981.

British Columbia's health care system is among the finest in the world . . . the addition of this unique dental insurance plan represents a major step in improving that system even further.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — An actors' strike was playing hob with movie and prime time TV production across the U.S. Tuesday and may even delay disclosure of who shot J.R. Ewing on the popular soap opera Dallas.

The scene telling who shot TV's favorite bad guy has been written and the disclosure scene had been scheduled to be shot in Hollywood.

But the strike by the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists against networks and movie and TV producers could hold up filming, a spokesman for Lorimar Productions said Tuesday.

All movies and prime-time television programs in production were stopped by the Monday strike of more than 60,000 members of the unions from Hollywood to New York against major film and TV producers and the three networks.

An independent film crew in Deer Lodge, Mont., managed to obtain a stipulation from SAG allowing them to continue filming Fast Walkin, but the agreement binds the movie producer to any settlement that emerges from the negotiations.

It appeared television's prime time shows would be most seriously affected. The strike comes in the middle of production for the upcoming fall season on CBS, NBC and ABC.

Laverne and Shirley was to have filmed its season premiere show before a live audience Tuesday.

The strike does not affect work in TV commercials, industrial or educational films, news broadcasts, game shows or daytime soap operas.

There were no pickets at any of the major studios, but SAG said it was planning a major demonstration Thursday morning at The Burbank Studios, headquarters for both Columbia Pictures and Warner Bros.

Negotiations continued Tuesday but both sides remained far apart on key issues. SAG and AFTRA want a 40 percent pay hike and some advantages in the burgeoning new technology of pay TV, discs and video casettes.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

309 IN MEMORIAM

DOBBIE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Gordon L., who passed away July 23, 1972.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear,
Fond memories linger everyday,
Remembrance keeps him dear.
—Always remembered by his wife Janet, sons Gordon, Garry and families.

DOBBIE-In loving memory of dear father, Gordon L. who passed away July 23, 1972.
If I had one lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
I would pray to God with all my heart,
For yesterday and you.
If teardrops were a stairway,
And memories a lane,
I would walk all the way to heaven,
And bring you back again.
A thousand times I needed you,
A thousand times I've cried,
If all my love could have saved you dad,
You never would have died.
From son Gordon and family.

SIMMONS — In loving memory of my husband, Leslie (Simmy), who passed away July 23, 1979.
Looking back in tenderness,
Along the path he trod.
I bless the years I had with him,
And leave the rest to God.
What would I give to clasp his hand,
His happy face to see,
To hear his voice, and see his smile,
That meant so much to me.
If all this world were mine to give,
I'd give it, yes and more.
If I could see my loving husband,
Come smiling through the door.
So many things have happened,
Since he was called away,
So many things to share with him,
Had he been left to stay.
Always remembered and sadly missed, Lee good mother,

it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with saddness and tears

Yours was a heart that was blithesome
and gay

Scattering sunshine
all along the way

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took you from us,
we cannot forget.

Daylilies delightful but don't overdo it

garden notes
by helen chesnut

A few years back, our next-door neighbor brought me over a small box loaded with daylilies. They were the common orange daylily that absolutely everyone has in the garden. What do you do? Plant them and hope they will die? With daylily roots, you can be assured this plan will fail. Daylilies are among the toughest and most persistent of plants. As a matter of fact, I suspect you'd need a blowtorch to kill them.

This patch of gift roots spread so fast I could visualize that whole side of the garden being devoured by them. Finally, after passing of what I hoped was a decent interval, I crept out into the garden while our neighbors were away and dug up the entire patch.

After that, I tended to rather turn up my nose at daylilies, ignoring the sections of catalogues that described many of the new and beautiful varieties on the market. Now, with the planning of a semi-shade garden on our new property, I have been enticed into investigating some of the new daylilies now being offered.

The daylily, by the way, is not a true lily. It has a fleshy root system rather like the iris, not at all like the scales of the true lily root. It is called lily because its blooms do look just like real lily blooms.

Its botanical name is Hemerocallis, from the Greek hemero, a day, and kallos, beauty. Beauty for a day — because each individual bloom lasts only one day. This, you may think, is too bad — but wait. Each flower stem has as many as 20 or more buds. So once a clump is established it can be expected to bloom three weeks or more. Some even bloom from July to Jack Frost's first visitation.

Grown in a fertile loam, given sun or partial shade and adequate moisture, you can expect a long season of luxuriant bloom from a clump of Hemerocallis. With plantings of early, mid-season and late bloomers you will have bloom from May through fall.

Now there are over 20,000 cultivars available in a huge range of flower types and colors. Flowers are plain and tailored, or ruffled and cerped, from two to eight inches (five to 20 cm) across. You can choose from bright to black-reds, pink, orchid-mauve, lavender, lemon, chartreuse. Some have a contrasting throat color. For example, you might choose one with a large ruffled velvety-red bloom with a bright orange throat.

There are dwarf daylilies for rock gardens, edgings and ground covers. Others grow to six feet. All make good cut flowers and the plants are tough and as pest-free as a plant can get. Clumps can be divided and replanted in early spring, or fall, which means you can plant some this fall and some more in the spring if you want to try out some new ones.

Get your hands on a good catalogue with a fairly extensive listing of Hemerocallis. One example is C.A. Cruickshank Ltd. (1015 Mount Pleasant Road, Toronto, Ont. M4P 2M1) which has two pages of listings.

Here are some that strike me as especially interesting. An August bloomer, Heirloom Lace, is described as extremely frilled, flat deep gold with a green throat. An excellent rebloomer with a heavy bud count, it stands 30 to 34 inches (76 gto 86 cm). Lady Inara blooms in July, an "exquisite heavily substanced flower." It has peach midribs with a lavender touch and a gold throat; heavily ruffled with 30 or more buds per flower stem.

Wild Wine blooms in July with deeply piled, black-red blooms. This gorgeous velvety black red six-inch (15 cm) flower has a beautiful chartreuse throat. Hall of Fame's daintily ruffled blooms are an azalea pink mellowing to Venetian pink with a glowing apricot throat.

Miniatures have 16- to 28-inch (40 to 70 cm) wiry stems and many little one- to 2½-inch (three to six cm) flowers. Dwarfs are shorter with generally larger flowers. Thumbelina, blooming in July and August, is a dwarf-miniature growing 12 to 15 inches (30 to 38 cm) high with sun-resistant blooms of golden orange.

U.K. unemployment at 1936 level and rising fast

LONDON (AP) — The ghost of the Great Depression is haunting Britain. There now are as many unemployed Britons as in 1936. And a secret government document is reported to say there may be a third more by 1983.

In the northwest port city of Liverpool the government-run careers office has just five jobs to offer 6,097 job seekers, most of them young school dropouts, one of the worst-hit groups in the country.

Nationally, school dropouts have less than a 10-per-cent chance of getting a job. A third of the country's unemployed are younger than 24.

In Northern Ireland, worst hit of the British regions, 14.4 per cent of all working-age men are without jobs.

The Conservative government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher refuses to spend public money to create more jobs, contending this will create more inflation.

But the opposition Labor party wants to use public money to create more jobs and says the Conservatives are deliberately creating unemployment to keep wages down.

The government spelled out the unemployment figures Tuesday as Labor MPs roared "Resign! Resign!" at Mrs. Thatcher in the House of Commons.

The employment department said the number of jobless in Britain now stands at 1,896,634. That represents 7.8 per cent of the British work force of 24.3 million and an increase of 236,900 from the previous month — the biggest monthly increase on record.

"The total level is back to the 1936 level," said Labor Leader James Callaghan. "I never thought that I would see this again."

Unemployment likely will go on rising, say the experts. It is expected to go to two million by the end of this year and 2.5 million by 1982. The Daily Mirror reported that a secret government document forecasts it may go to more than three million by 1983 if the Conservatives stick to current policies.

This would be over the Great Depression peak of three million — 20 per cent of the then-smaller workforce — reached in 1933.

The worst hit areas of the economy are the metal-manufacturing industry, mechanical engineering, the auto industry, construction and textiles. Together, they account for 47 per cent of all unemployment.

Many trades which supply retailers have been affected by the slump in consumer spending while many workers who normally find jobs each summer in hotels and the catering industry are going on the dole instead this year. The reason is the recession hitting tourism.

The Conservatives put a lot of the blame on the current world recession and wage increases currently running at about 17 per cent, which they say have priced British products out of markets abroad and at home.

Bolivian Indians march with sticks to aid rebel miners

Times News Services

LA PAZ — Gunfire echoed today through the valley cradling La Paz, and Indians armed with sticks and rocks were reported marching to the aid of partisans fighting the new military regime southeast of the Bolivian capital.

Bolivian army troops patrolled deserted streets in the three kilometre-high high capital city of 600,000 people during the 9:00 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew decreed by the junta.

The clandestine 21st of December radio station Tuesday afternoon reported that 4,500 Potosi Indians were marching to help rebellious mineworkers in Catavi, 496 km southeast of La Paz.

The radio said the Indians were were armed mostly with sticks and rocks and that they would "march day and night" to reach the mining centre.

Unconfirmed reports also said 5,000 peasants are gathering near the Siglo Veinte mine, 250 km south of the capital, "and are organizing with miners into an effective army."

The southeastern portion of Bolivia, a rugged mountainous area, has been the centre of armed resistance to the latest in Bolivia's long history of military governments.

Anti-government snipers in La Paz, meanwhile, used the cover of night in their fighting against Bolivian army troops, who put Gen. Luis Garcia Meza in power during a military coup last Thursday.

The new president said his government's first priority will be to carry out an agrarian revolution, to overcome the structural stagnation caused by small, unproductive and poor farms.

The 25,000 troops under Garcia Meza have managed to bring most of the rebellious mining district under control since the takeover.

Ousted President Lidia Gueiller, who resigned despite earlier declarations she would die before turning power over to the military, remained in the sanctuary of the Vatican embassy.

Meanwhile, the government also said terrorists assaulted the water-purification plant at Pampajasi in the mountains above La Paz but that "the precautions taken (by the government) caused the effort to fail." It did not elaborate. The plant is the capital's main water source.

The rightist military officers who seized control of the government have set up machine-gun nests at some public utilities and deployed tanks, armored cars and soldiers at strategic points around the city.

Most factories in the industrial district on the outskirts of the capital remained closed Tuesday in response to a general strike call from opponents of the junta. But most businesses in the heart of the city were opened following a government warning that workers who do not show up will be fired.

Bear loses fare fight

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — More than 1,000 people who tried to jam into the Qantas Airways office Tuesday to buy 420 cheap fares to Australia finished by trying to beat up the airline's koala bear mascot.

A man in the mascot costume had to take cover inside the building, but was not hurt, an airline spokesman said.

People in the crowd, some who had been waiting 24 hours for tickets, complained that scalpers had jumped the line and tried to sell tickets for higher prices.

The airline offered $199 round-trip fares on its new route between Los Angeles and Sydney or Melbourne. Officials said this was 80 per cent less than the lowest fare offered by any other airline on the route.

But the offer was limited to 30 seats on each of the three weekly Qantas flights in August.

Police and security men had to keep the crowd from blocking traffic after some people spent the night outside the airline office in sleeping bags and on chairs.

Three Mile Island plant explored

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Two engineers clad in radiation repellent suits today spent 20 minutes inside the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor building conducting tests needed to plan decontamination of the severely crippled power generator.

The first humans inside the giant structure since an accident closed the plant March 28, 1979, William Behrle III, 36, and Micheal Benson, 27, entered the pitch-black, cavern-like reactor vessel this morning, gathering radiation level samples and taking photographs.

The radiation samples, gathered on swabs, were intended to give scientists an idea of the difficulty of the 4-year, $400 million clean-up program.

"Everything went according to plan," said David Klucsik, spokesman for plant operator Metropolitan-Edison Co.

Klucsik said he would have a report on conditions inside the reactor building and on the engineers' health later in the day.

The first attempted entry mission was aborted May 20 when Behrle and Benson failed to budge the 1,000-pound steel door to the sealed reactor vessel because of a rusted deadbolt lock pin about the size of a pencil. The pin later was loosened and removed.

For today's mission, the men were outfitted with double layers of protective clothing, including black firemen's cloaks, pants and rubber boots to be worn over regular radiation clothing.

Spill forces evacuation

SHELL BEACH, La. (UPI) — Workers wearing oxygen masks today cleaned up poisonous acid spilled in the collision of two ships in a Mississippi River outlet. An estimated 3,000 people had to be evacuated, but no injuries were reported.

Officials said up to 41,000 pounds of a hydrobromide acid leaked from a container on the German motor vessel Tesbank after it collided with the Panamanian-registered bulk carrier Sea Danial Tuesday evening. On contact with water, the chemical makes a toxic fume that can burn.

KKK verdict sets black mob to riot

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (UPI) — Police restored order today in a black district wracked by firebombings and looting triggered by an all-white jury's lenient verdict for three Ku Klux Klansmen.

Four buildings were heavily damaged by fire bombs and rocks and at least one firemen was slightly injured in the violence that flared Tuesday night and early today in Chattanooga's Alton Park district.

At the height of the disturbance, groups of angry blacks roamed the streets shouting obscenities and proclaiming "we want justice."

Order was restored about 7 a.m. in the Alton Park area, which is located in the southern portion of Chattanooga.

The trouble erupted following the acquittal of two Ku Klux Klansmen and a light sentence for a third klansmen in a shotgun attack on four black women.

Firemen and police were called into the area about midnight to deal with a string of fires apparently set by arsonists.

About 50 officers sealed off the area and stood guard while the firemen battled to bring the fires under control.

Eight blacks were arrested on looting charges, including six who were caught inside a store.

Police spokesman Bob Gill said the violence was mostly the work of about five to 15 black gangs, with members ranging in age from 16 to 30.

There was one report of shooting in the area but police could not confirm it.

An all-white jury Tuesday convicted klansman Marshall Thrash, 30, of opening fire and wounding four black women outside a tavern last April 19. He and two of his companions had set fire to two crosses in the black district and, according to testimony in the trial, Thrash went "berserk" and began shooting when none of the blacks seemed to be paying any attention to the burning crosses.

Thrash was convicted on three counts of assault and battery and a third count of simple assault. He was fined a total of $225 and was sentenced to two nine-month terms, and one two-month term in the workhouse.

Two other members of the klan group, William Church, 23, the Imperial Wizard of the Justice Knights of the KKK, and Larry Payne, 26, were acquitted. Their lawyers claimed they were just along for the ride and had no idea Thrash would start firing from the window of his car.

The four women were sprayed with birdshot as they were leaving a tavern on 9th Street in Chattanooga.

Tornado strikes town in Maryland

United Press International

A tornado accompanying severe thunderstorms struck the town of Solomons Island in southern Maryland Tuesday evening, damaging a marina, overturning several trailers at a naval installation and causing power outages. No injuries were reported.

The winds gusted to 144 kilometres an hour.

Furious downpour drops N.Y. mercury

The Associated Press

Sun-scorched land from Florida to Texas soaked up some rain as thunderstorms lowered the heat wave's record-breaking temperatures a little, and violent storms in the eastern United States left thousands without electrical power.

Flood warnings were issued in Mississippi, where several hundred people stayed away from their flooded homes for a second day after a 27-centimetre rainfall.

Several dozen people were evacuated briefly from low-lying areas of Johnstown, Pa., early today after 7.5 centimetres of rain overflowed streams.

The mercury dropped to a refreshing 25° in New York during a furious downpour.

Brief but welcome rain fell throughout Texas, parts of Georgia and the Gulf of Mexico coast, Arkansas and elsewhere in the middle U.S., but farmers need more rain to reduce the damage done by the drought and heat wave that has claimed some 1,226 lives since June 22.

In Arkansas, the federal Farmers Home Administration declared the state a disaster area.

In Mississippi, National Guards patrolled flooded neighborhoods in Belzoni today as hundreds of residents waited for water — up to more than a metre in some homes — to recede.

In Los Angeles, second-stage smog alerts were issued.

Victims pass hat for hijacker

MIAMI (UPI) — The pilot of a Delta Air Lines jet, hijacked to Cuba, had enough trouble finding a place to land. But then the crew had to pass the hat among the passengers to pay $1,029 in "landing fees" demanded by Cuban officials before they could take off again.

Flight 1135, originating in Chicago, returned safely to Miami Tuesday night, where the 132 remaining passengers and crew of 14 were reimbursed for their donations, the plane refuelled and the flight cleared for its original destination — San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The hijacker, a denim-clad 30-year-old Hispanic with a beard and long hair who said he had "to get away" because of personal problems, stayed behind in Cuba.

The Lockheed L-1011 was 320 kilometres out of Miami Tuesday night when the hijacker got out of his first-class seat and poked a small handgun in the stomach of stewardess Doris Woods. Twisting her arm, he told her in Spanish he wanted to go to Cuba.

Woods understands no Spanish so they walked to the cockpit door, where a bilingual stewardess translated his demands and a third stewardess relayed them via intercom to the flight deck.

The hijacker claimed he had a bomb, although no one apparently saw it. The man reportedly kept his gun at Woods' back the entire flight.

When the plane finally reached Havana, pilot Capt. Lyle Gildermaster found visibility at zero and Jose Marti Airport closed. Havana Control Tower ordered the plane on to Camaguey, Cuba's third largest city 480 km inland.

Once there, however, the Cuban authorities refused to let the plane leave until the crew coughed up $1,029 in "landing fees."

Faced with the choice of a night in Camaguey, the 132 passengers aboard dropped in dollar bills as stewardesses passed the hat. Within two hours, the Cubans had their "landing fees" and flight 1135 was headed back for Miami.

One passenger who disembarked in Miami upon the plane's return, William Fortuno, 24, said the passengers showed little reaction to the captain's announcement they were being hijacked.

"They acted like typical New Yorkers," Fortuno said. "They just kept reading their newspapers."

Some of the passengers were smiling despite the ordeal, but Margie Wolf of Providence, R.I., said, "It was the most frightening thing that happened to me in my life."

It was the first successful hijacking to Cuba since Jan. 25.

Delta officials — with considerable experience in hijackings — said they could recall no "landing fees" ever being charged at the Havana airport, where most hijackers head.

Boy's asylum case threat to families?

CHICAGO (AP) — The granting of asylum to a 12-year-old Ukrainian boy whose parents insist he return to the Soviet Union with them sets a precedent with great potential for interference in family life, several legal experts said Tuesday.

The U.S. government's decision to provide refuge for Walter Polovchak is politically motivated and unwise, said Patrick Murphy, Cook County public guardian.

"I think it's a bad precedent to let a 12-year-old boy tell his parents what he wants to do," said Murphy. "I don't think it's a healthy situation to set a child against his parents."

The boy wants to stay in Chicago. His parents, Michael and Anna Polovchak, want to move back to the Ukraine, which they left in January.

Granting asylum to a 12-year-old against his parents' wishes is unusual, said Steven Lubet, a Northwestern University professor specializing in family and immigration law: "Generally the granting of asylum is reserved for people who are in legitimate danger of persecution."

Lydia Tugendrajch, a New York City lawyer who specializes in children's rights, said separation of the boy from his parents is an "incredible intrusion by the state."

But Franklin Zimring, a University of Chicago law professor, said the boy's request could be justified.

"He (the boy) and a lawyer can say, 'Look, if parental rights are not terminated, something terrible is going to happen,' " Zimring said.

Walter, a seventh grader and his sister, Natalie, 17, who has a visa, ran away from their family's North Side residence because of their parents' decision to return to the Ukraine.

Immigration officials say Walter has been granted asylum for one year and then would be eligible to apply for permanent residence.

Meanwhile, the Soviet embassy in Washington has called the decision a "violation of all principles of morality and humanism" that may have "far-reaching consequences" on relations between the U.S. and Moscow:

"It appears that no foreign family with minor children present in the U.S. is guaranteed against the possibility that the same thing will happen to it . . . "It should be clear to every educated and unbiased person that a 12-year-old child doesn't understand what political asylum is."

Housing costs lead U.S. hikes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices in the U.S. rose at an annual rate of 12.4 percent in June, slightly faster than May, largely because of rapidly rising housing costs, the labor department reported today. Gasoline prices declined for the second month in a row, but food prices increased slightly.

The June increase showed a slight speedup in inflation from an annual rate of 10.9 percent in May. But this still represented a big improvement over the 18 percent rate during the early months of this year.

On a monthly basis, prices rose 1 percent in June compared with 0.9 percent in May.

In its midyear budget and economic review released earlier this week, the administrtion predicted an inflation rate of 12 percent for 1980 just under 10 percent in 1981. Analysts said today's figures did not appear to change that forecast.

Four-fifths of the increase in inflation between May and June came from housing, and that was because recently falling mortgage rates have not yet shown up in the CPI figures.

This is because the mortgage rates which have been falling recently are "commitment" rates, quoted by lenders for mortgages that will not become final for several months. The CPI is based on final mortgage rates, based on commitment rates several months old.

Gold leap is surprise

Times News Services

LONDON — The price of gold leaped about $24 an ounce today and even the experts were surprised. The dollar's price rose.

"We truly have no explanation for the sudden jump," said a dealer in Zurich, where gold opened at $634.50 an ounce and spurted to $637.50, up $24 from Tuesday's close.

In London, the afternoon price for gold was fixed at $631.25 an ounce.

Plastic heart ready for humans

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Doctors at the University of Utah say they are ready to implant a temporary mechanical heart in a human as a means of supporting life until a permanent transplant donor can be found.

Dr. Donald Olsen, director of the university human experimentation committee, is considering an application by the surgeons to implant a polyurethane heart in a human patient.

The patient has not been selected, and it was not known when the committee would act on the request by the university surgeons to perform the operation.

The technique would be similar to one used by Texas surgeon Denton Cooley in a 1969 operation in Houston where the patient did not survive long enough to receive a transplant.

The Utah surgeons would use technology developed in years of experimentation on calves and sheep at the Artificial Organs Laboratory in Salt Lake City. The laboratory has been developing artificial hearts and implanting them in animals since 1967.

One calf survived 220 days on a mechanical heart, and four animals are currently living with the implanted devices, said Olsen, a veterinarian. Most of the recent test animals died when they outgrew their mechanical hearts, rather than because of problems associated with the devices.

The unit that would be placed in a man is an air-driven pump about the size of a human heart. It consists of two chambers with diaphragms that push the blood through the circulatory system. An external power source would drive the organ.

Olsen said the organs division also was working on a new type of heart that would have an internal turbine motor. The self-contained unit would eliminate the need for tubing leading to an external motor.

Forgetful mum gives baby roof ride

NEW YORK (AP) — A six-week-old baby rolled off a car roof when his mother drove off without realizing he was there.

But the child was found uninjured a half hour later.

Police said the incident occurred Tuesday when Robert Kornbach, 19, of Plattsburgh stopped his car to let his 18-year-old wife, Maureen, drive.

Mrs. Kornbach's sister got out of the front seat, put six-week-old Brian on the roof of the car and went to the back seat.

Unaware that the baby had been left on the roof, Mrs. Kornbach began driving, police said.

When Kornbach decided to drive again a half hour later, the family realized the baby was missing.

As they rushed to the spot where they had first stopped, they learned Brian had been found and taken to Long Island Jewish Hospital.

Police battle boycotting black youths

KING WILLIAM'S TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — Club-swinging police injured at least 160 boycotting black students Tuesday during a clash outside a high school in a black township near the eastern Cape city of King William's Town, the South African Press Association (SAPA) reported.

The report said 58 of the students were hospitalized with "broken limbs and head cuts" and more than 100 others were treated and released following a police baton charge at the Archie Velile high school.

Several of those hurt in the clash were "seriously injured," SAPA said.

Futurists chart rough road ahead

By HENRY GINIGER
New York Times

TORONTO — Five thousand people have been in Toronto since Sunday trying to chart the future of the world.

The so-called futurists gathered here — government officials, international civil servants, philosophers, poets and seers, scientists, planners, managers and others — have so far produced a bewildering variety of visions and ideas in dozens of meeting rooms and corridors spread over two of Toronto's largest hotels. The discussions have resulted in many predictions, a number of them dire, including economic depression, nuclear war, starvation, revolution, tyranny and fanaticism.

"But if you try to impose order out of this chaos, you are asking for trouble," said Edward Cornish, whose organization, along with the Canadian Association for Futures Study, is sponsoring this week's meeting. He is president of the World Future Society, a private Washington-based group with 50,000 members around the world.

When the conference ends Thursday, Cornish said, it is not likely to produce a statement that will tell the world how to shape up because "that would not be very productive."

From discussions titled "The Future of Rational Thinking" to "Marketing for Tomorrow's Customer," the floor has been open to almost anyone with an idea on how to make tomorrow better. There was, for example, Herman Kahn of the Hudson Institute, Aurelio Peccei of the Club of Rome and Bertrand de Jouvenel, the French journalist and political scientist. In general, these were the pessimists.

Kahn said that today's young people "are not turned on by economic growth." Peccei said the superpowers were doing their best to make the world worse. de Jouvenel said governments were being constantly pushed into thinking and acting in the short term.

Hundreds of lesser figures, given the golden opportunity of an audience, eagerly grabbed it. However, sometimes what were called idea exchanges were reduced to a single speaker and an audience of one.

There were obscure groups with a message, such as the Foundation for Inner Peace or the Center for Remote Sensing, in addition to frankly commercial outfits trying to sell an idea, a product or a technology.

The motto of the conference was "Thinking Globally — Acting Locally." Accordingly, in formal workshops and idea exchanges, delegates have tried to identify the great political, economic, social and technical problems facing the world and how people can act upon them in their own little corners.

Ocasionally they speak at cross-purposes, as when one workshop on community decision-making earnestly discussed how to get citizens to participate, while at another meeting, a speaker was saying that the future would be run by "a world mandarinate of economic managers, technical experts and career bureaucrats" who will leave little room for ordinary citizens to have a say.

Occasionally there would be a communications breakdown or a bit of garble. One session on participatory democracy could not find any speakers to participate. When a philosopher failed to appear to discuss the need for teamwork among scholars of different disciplines, desperate organizers replaced him with an insurance salesman who described how he helped families to develop a particular style of life and then sold them policies geared to it.

Cornish said the organizers did not want to be rigid about who could participate because "people disagree on what is real and what is fantasy, what is important and what is trivia."

What Cornish, a 52-year-old former journalist, and his associates see as a major goal is a step toward the formation of a "world future network," which, he said, "will link up futurists and others in all nations and all walks of life as a necessary preliminary to establishing global consensus on how to solve specific problems."

As far as this conference is concerned, the network is overwhelmingly North American. Of the 5,000 delegates, only 500 are from outside the United States and Canada. There are only 200 delegates from the underdeveloped nations.

Pope to visit West Gemany

BONN (Reuter) — Pope John Paul has accepted an invitation to visit West Germany, sources at the West German Bishops' Conference announced.

It has not been decided whether the Pope will start his visit Nov. 15, the 700th anniversary of the death of Saint Albertus Magnus, or in May, the sources said.

Volcano blows stack again

UMBRELLA ANTENNA unfolds to make a three-metre, dish-shaped earth station. The antenna, which can be easily carried under one arm, was unveiled in Toronto Tuesday at the First Global Conference on the Future. Conference panelists agreed the device, which at $3,995 puts satellite signals within reach of more than just cable companies, is a major threat to television networks.

Fallout funnels through Interior

Times News Services

VANCOUVER, Wash. — A new crater, glowing red, was spotted today on Mount St. Helens following a spectacular series of eruptions that hurled ash nearly 18 kilometres into the air and sent it drifting into Canada.

The eruptions ended a six-week lull in the volcanic activity. And residents of the Interior communities of Fernie, Sparwood, Cranbrook, Salmo and Creston were among the B.C. residents awakening this morning to find their yards dusted lightly with grey-white ash, which also affected cut hay crops in the Fernie district.

At Fernie, which was hot and muggy and where winds were whipping the ash around, motorists were advised to use their headlights.

Ash also reduced visibility sharply this morning in the southern foothills region of Alberta, as the plume swooped down from the Rockies and began to swing northeast to the Saskatoon district of Sackatchewan.

Also in the news today was Mt. Gorely, a dormant Soviet volcano 64 kilometres from the city of Petropavlovsk on the Kamchatka Peninsula, that erupted in a three-kilometre-high tower of ash and gasses.

The news agency Tass reported the blast in the sparsely populated region destroyed a lake that had formed in its crater. No injuries were reported.

While fallout from the Tuesday's St. Helens blasts was not expected to bother coastal B.C. immediately, Vancouver city council Tuesday approved an emergency program for dealing with it. This included procedures to protect city facilities, including computer rooms, cooling towers and air conditioning units in city hall, the public safety building and the fire department.

Subsidy cut hits Yarrows

The federal government decision to cut shipbuilding subsidies to nine per cent from 20 per cent will cost Victoria 300 jobs within six months, local Burrard Yarrows Corporation manager Don Challinor said today.

He said the Esquimalt yard has no major projects after the new ferry is completed in April for the provincial government.

The current work force is 720 but about 300 would have to be let go by year's end unless Ottawa changes its mind.

Protests have been sent to Senator Ray Perrault. The shipyard has also sought the help of the B.C. government.

Challinor said the action hurts B.C. yards more than its competitors in Quebec because the eastern yards have a heavy backlog of orders and will be busy for many months.

They will not have to bid on many projects this year and they will not be greatly affected by the new subsidy levels.

But the action is devastating for B.C. yards, Challinor said.

Of B.C.'s 2,800 shipyard workers, about 1,000 could be laid off by year's end.

"That's how serious it is."

Challinor said the Canadian yards must be subsidized because labor rates are higher here than in competing countries.

Building trades strike averted, but price high

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators for B.C. construction workers and contractors averted a province-wide shutdown with a tentative agreement Tuesday that a contractors' spokesman said employers cannot afford.

Roy Gautier of the 17-union B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council said the proposed two-year contract, which provides increases in wages and benefits of $3.35 an hour, is the best in the country. Gautier said the council will recommend its members accept it.

But Chuck McVeigh, president of the Construction Labor Relations Association, expressed misgivings about the deal.

"That's the price we had to pay for labor peace," he said. "The only alternative was a lengthy strike that would have cost this province millions of dollars."

The contract provides for a 22-per-cent increase over two years with 10.3 per cent or $1.55 coming in the first year, said Gautier. Wages are retroactive to May of this year.

Construction wages at present average $15.07 an hour.

Both Gautier and McVeigh agreed that the trade council's withdrawal of its demand for an affiliation clause was crucial to the settlement. The clause would have allowed all tradesmen to shut down a construction project over the presence of unions not affiliated with the building trades.

In addition to the wage and benefits package, the contract provides for a geographical (or multi-employer) certification clause.

Gautier said the clause gets around Section 40 of the code, which says that a building trades union has the right to represent all workers in a given geographical area or project site provided it can prove that it represents the majority of workers, and if it has the backing of the majority of contractors involved.

With the new settlement, that voluntary support from association contractors will become obligatory.

Gautier said the unions also won a reservation clause allowing unionized construction workers to withdraw their labor in order to aid a different union involved in a dispute at the same project.

McVeigh said the agreement gives workers the highest wages in Canada, a situation he blamed on the industry-wide bargaining system that has been in effect in B.C. since February, 1978, when the B.C. Labor Relations Board ordered the 17 construction unions into a single bargaining unit.

Gautier rejected McVeigh's statement that the settlement was too expensive for the provincial economy.

"The contract reflects the climate in the industry at the present time," he said. "When there's work around the contractors do well and we feel we're entitled to our piece of the pie."

McVeigh said both sides will take the contract to their members today.

Sellers slipping

LONDON (UPI) — Film star Peter Sellers is in "very grave" condition and losing ground in his fight for life, a hospital bulletin said today.

Sellers, 54, who suffered a massive heart attack and then cardiac arrest Tuesday is in the intensive care unit of Middlesex Hospital where doctors earlier today said he was "critically ill."

But in their third bulletin of the day, the hospital said "there has been a deterioration in his condition which is now very grave."

Sellers' fourth wife, actress Lynne Frederick, arrived from Los Angeles today and his second wife, Britt Ekland, flew from Stockholm with their daughter, Victoria, 15.

Jan. 1 B.C. denticare plan just for young, aged, poor

B.C. will begin an $85-million dental care insurance program Jan. 1, Health Minister Rafe Mair announced today.

The program is primarily intended to help children, senior citizens and the poor, he said.

"The Dental Care Plan will cover nearly 915,000 people when it begins, including 415,000 children and 290,000 senior citizens," Mair said.

The minister unveiled the plan in a joint announcement with the College of Dental Surgeons of B.C.

The plan will pay up to $700 a person annually for basic dental services available from general practice dentists, and for dentures. Mair said there will be no premiums or deductibility.

Four groups are eligible:

— Those whose Medical Services Plan premiums are paid by the ministry of human resources, and their dependents. The plan will cover 100 per cent of insured services.

— Those who receive premium assistance from the Medical Services Plan, including senior citizens receiving premium assistance, and dependents. Again, the plan will cover 100 per cent of insured services.

— For all other senior citizens, 65 and over, the plan will cover 50 per cent of insured services to the annual maximum of $700.

— Children 14 and under not covered in other categories will have 100 per cent coverage for a once-yearly preventive care package, consisting of an oral check-up, cleaning, scaling and fluoride treatment. The plan will cover 50 per cent of other insured services.

Eligible persons registered with the Medical Services Plan will automatically be covered. Other persons will have to apply for coverage.

A booklet detailing benefits will be available to the public before the plan's introduction, and a media advertising campaign is planned, Mair said.

He said dentists will be paid under the plan on a fee schedule negotiated with the College of Dental Surgeons of B.C.

Participating dentists will bill the plan directly on behalf of the patient, who will receive a copy of the submitted claim.

Patients of non-participating dentists will have to pay the dentist directly, then submit a claim for reimbursement.

The dental college hailed the program as a positive step forward in dental care.

"We're especially pleased that the plan is aimed at helping those who need it most — children, senior citizens and the disadvantaged," said president Dr. Ted Ramage.

Reward : £1,000 for a good job

LONDON (CP) — Unemployment has hit a 44-year high in Britain and Andrew Leslau has given job hunting an extensive new twist.

Leslau, 23, who recently graduated in Russian studies from Essex University, is offering £1,000, about $2,750, to anyone who will give him a job.

He made the offer by placing a classified ad in The Times, which set him back £62.

The ad in Tuesday's paper reads: "Special offer £1,000 of my own savings in return for most interesting job opportunity.

"I am a bright new male graduate; travelled, articulate, serious, industrious, career minded. I want to move with the times."

Lesau is not the only one who is hard up for work in Britain.

Figures released by the government Tuesday showed that the jobless total stands at 1,896,634, the highest level since 1936.

That's an increase of 236,958 over last month's figures and school leavers account for almost half that increase. (For complete story on unemployment see page 52).

New phoney letter

Another phoney letter has appeared on the B.C. political scene — this one bearing the forged signature of Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe and warning of a fall election.

"There may be a fall election so please register for canvassing now," says the handwritten postscript on what appears to be a recent Vancouver-Little Mountain Social Credit constituency letter.

But Wolfe said Tuesday neither the signature nor the writing is his.

"There's obviously just somebody playing games," he said. "I'm assured by our executive and by the head of our canvassing people, that none of the members who were involved in this wrote on the letter or anything. It's not my writing."

Snakes alive! This is a . . . a holdup

CHICAGO (AP) — A bandit awakened a man in an apartment, pointed a snake at him and took $6 before fleeing on a bicycle, police said.

Antonio Zavala, 28, told police the snake looked like a boa constrictor and was two metres long.

Policeman Arthur Nielsen said Tuesday that Zavala chased the robber, "but he didn't really want to catch him because he wouldn't know what to do if he did."

A 15-year-old boy had been seen in the area carrying a snake. Police found the snake curled up in a box under a stairwell, but they didn't find the youth.

Mail thefts cost banks $2M a year

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's 11 chartered banks lose more than $2 million a year in mail thefts and the banking industry wants better protection from the Post Office.

In a brief presented Tuesday to a federal inquiry into postal security, the Canadian Bankers' Association said the Post Office isn't serious enough about looking after its mail.

"(Its) Security and Investigation Branch is relatively ineffective in preventing and uncovering mail-related crime," it said.

The bankers said that special packets they use to send cash and jewels to and from remote branches are hot items to mail robbers and thieves have taken packets valued at about $3 million during the past five years.

Banks also have trouble getting new credit cards out to users without having many waylaid. Losses on stolen cards average $1,600 per card, the brief said, although total losses have decreased since 1975 after "a great deal of effort and additional cost to the banks."

Cheque fraud also "accounts for losses of several millions of dollars each year," the bankers said, and "the majority of cheque frauds are mail-related."

For example, nearly 12,000 federal government cheques worth $10.6 million were stolen from the mail and illegally cashed between 1975-79.

The brief noted most of the direct loss in cheque thefts is absorbed by retail outlets which cash the cheques.

"We do not imply that cheque theft is largely perpetrated by postal employees," said the brief.

But the Post Office plays a vital role as "an important link in the payment system of our country." One in three envelopes in the system contains a cheque or other instrument of payment, says the brief.

"As such, (the Post Office) should assume full responsibility for developing a service which is secure and reliable in every respect."

The bankers association recommended that the maximum liability of $100 that the Post Office assumes for registered mail and money packet service be increased, and that a higher security priority be accorded for first class service.

The Post Office's 75 security personnel in Canada should be given better training and more powers, and "be re-organized along the lines of the U.S. Postal Inspection Service, with powers of arrest and prosecution."

The bankers association also called for tougher sentences for convicted mail robbers.

City sympathetic but can't afford to donate park land

All he wants is to do is remember the kids

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

When Joseph Haegert was a boy, children were seen and not heard.

And children like Joseph, who had to work for a living, weren't often tipped or even thanked.

Haegert was an eight-year-old orphan who came to Victoria with his guardian in 1910.

At 13 he was put to work delivering magazines for $8 a month and his childhood memories are of hard times and few kind words.

Boiled chicken feed was his breakfast, lunch and supper many times in those days.

Those memories helped make Haegert, 78, an advocate of the young and an active man in community affairs.

He is the president of the Cool-Aid Society, and one of his three sons is the organization's doctor.

But his efforts to persuade city hall to convert two properties near his home into a children's park failed Tuesday night.

City council's parks committee was moved by Haegert's letter urging that a park on Pembroke be named for "Mom Alexander," a longtime Fernwood resident and member of a Victoria pioneer black family.

But not far enough to forego the sale of two city-owned lots at 1321-25 Pembroke needed for the park site Haegert wants.

Aldermen did vote, however, to honor Mrs. Alexander by naming after her the little green patch created by the closure of Pembroke on the west side of Fernwood, a vest pocket-sized park about as big as an average backyard.

Joseph Haegert surveys property

"I believe that Mom Alexander (who lived at 1360 Pembroke, almost opposite the proposed park) was the sweetest lady this city has ever known," Haegert wrote. "She was one of a black family which came to Victoria in the gold rush days."

Haegert claims Fernwood's Neighborhood Improvement Program committee bought the land several years ago intending it as a park for the children of Fernwood, where there isn't much green space to play.

But aldermen say the city shelled out $75,000 for the land as a way of providing extra funds to finish several other NIP public works in the district, and now the city needs the money back.

So the house at 1325 Pembroke and adjacent lot will soon go on the real estate market.

With his wife Gertrude, Haegert has lived in his small, two-storey house at 1516 Pembroke ever since he carried his bride over the threshold 47 years ago. They raised three sons and a daughter there.

A colorful character, who says his father was a Prussian adventurer and his mother the daughter of a British army surgeon, Haegert was born in India where his father ran a mission hospital.

He was sent to school in England after his parents died and tutored by a governess who told him it was proper to look down his nose at servants and the working class.

But Haegert's inheritance was frittered away by a money-loving guardian shortly after the move to Canada and he became a member of the working class himself.

As a youth he was exposed to the seamier side of Victoria life.

"As a messenger boy I saw a side of life no other person would ever see," he remembers.

Gambling, prostitution and heavy drinking were common and one of Haegert's most frequent deliveries around town was whisky from the Hudson's Bay store — the only outfit allowed to sell hard liquor.

"There were pubs and brothels all over, the place was full of prostitutes."

Long lines would form as soldiers and sailors waited their turn to enter one of the houses of ill repute.

"Opium smoking was something nobody thought anything about in those days."

Respectable women did not drink with men and did not work outside the home.

"As soon as a woman got married, she was fired. It was entirely a man's world in those days."

Victoria was a city of boardwalks and Pandora Avenue, where popular evangelist Dr. Oliver pitched his tent on Sunday, was a sea of mud most of the time.

No one worked Sundays, but all the stores were open six days a week until midnight and filled with people.

"Few were buying, they just looked around. People were poor."

Movies, at a nickel a show, were popular. The Victoria Theatre, where Eaton's is now, always seemed to have a hypnotist on the bill.

Horse and buggy was still the mode of transportation and the local brewery used large dray horses to pull its wagons.

Haegert graduated to a horse and wagon when he was 13 to make his deliveries.

"Horses were running away all the time. Everybody used to stop runaway horses. There was nothing to it at all."

Illiteracy was a problem, as were a number of diseases like tuberculosis and diabetes.

Haegert, who wanted to be a doctor, passed university entrance exams even though he had little formal schooling, but bad health prevented him from completing his training.

He worked as a wireless operator on CPR ships before becoming an electrical technician.

But he has never forgotten how difficult it was for a young boy to grow up alone in an environment where people did not care about children.

And that's one of the reason he wanted that new park for Fernwood kids.

New bid for alarm on prison escapes?

By BRENDA DALGLISH

A new campaign may be launched to have the federal government install an alarm system to warn nearby residents when prisoners escape from William Head minimum security prison.

Resident John Waterman said today — following the escape of three prisoners Tuesday — the time might be right to re-submit a proposal made several years ago to the federal justice ministry.

"If there were an alarm it would eliminate the possiblity of an escaper catching anyone unawares," said Waterman, one of the residents who made the original proposal.

Ottawa turned down the suggestion then, saying an alarm might only cause the community and the escaper to panic and increase the possiblity of violence.

Waterman disagrees.

"If this were a residential area that might be true but because it's rural an escaper can avoid going near residences or out buildings if he knows people might be expecting him."

Residents of Metchosin, and particularly those near the prison, are apprehensive.

"Sure we're concerned about the escapes," said Geoff Hett who lives on William Head Road.

"We know the prisoners want to get away from here as fast as they can but with all the farm buildings around to hide in we're worried a child may just walk into a hayloft or something at the wrong moment."

Another resident wondered about the number of recent escapes.

"I hate to condemn people and it's easy to say someone else isn't doing his job but there seem to have a lot of escapes the last while."

Since the beginning of this year 10 prisoners have escaped in five separate incidents.

He suggested the wharf, parts of which have been frequently used as a raft, might be removed.

Except for an abandoned raft, the prisoners who escaped Tuesday vanished without a trace, Colwood RCMP spokesman said today.

Victoria ensemble tops field

A Victoria ensemble is the first recipient of the new Richard W. Cooke Trophy in the National Competitive Festival of Music.

The trophy, together with a $300 bursary provided by the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, was awarded to the St. Matthias Church Chamber Singers for excellence in the small ensemble category.

Frances Pollet is the musical director of the group.

Ensembles from all Canadian provinces may enter tapes on the recommendation of adjudicators at regional festivals.

The St.Matthias Chamber Singers won top marks and an outstanding adjudication from judge David Astor in the Greater Victoria Music Festival last spring.

Beer supply all but gone; settlement chances dim

The tap supplying Greater Victoria with beer was all but turned off today as the province appeared headed for a brewery shutdown similar to one in Alberta.

Most liquor stores had no beer left and spokesmen said they're not expecting any more.

There has been no response from the Brewery, Winery and Distillery Workers Union to a companies' ultimatum that the employees accept a final offer by Friday or be locked out.

Both sides expressed doubt there would be a breakthrough before the deadline.

The companies' final offer amounted to a 29.7-per-cent increase that would raise a bottling line worker's salary to about $27,000 a year by the end of the agreement, but the union says security and not wages is the main issue.

Meanwhile, strikes and lockouts reduced beer production in Alberta to a trickle today — 16,000 gallons a day from Uncle Ben's Brewery in Red Deer, the only independent brewer in the province.

Alberta's major brewers locked their doors at midnight Tuesday when they were unable to reach a contract agreement with their workers.

The lockout was the brewers' response to strike action earlier this month by workers at Labatt's in Edmonton and Alberta Brewers Agents employees in Edmonton and Calgary. It signalled Alberta's third consecutiye summer beer drought.

Things weren't much better for drinkers who prefer something stronger than beer. Workers at Alberta liquor control board warehouses in Calgary and Edmonton are off the job despite government anti-strike legislation and supplies are being depleted.

Management personnel were redistributing supplies between stores but an outlet in the North Hill Shopping Centre in Calgary was closed Tuesday when employees refused to cross an Alberta Union of Provincial Employees picket line.

No panic but dog shots urged

Dog owners whose pets have a high exposure to other dogs should have the animals vaccinated against an intestinal virus called canine parovirus, a Victoria veterinarian said today.

Dr. Alan Hoey of the Oak Bay Pet Clinic was commenting in an interview on a report from eastern Canada that there has been an increase in the number of dogs suffering from the disease in many Canadian centres.

The symptoms of the virus are severe vomiting and bloody diarrhea and, if untreated, it can be fatal.

But Hoey cautioned that to date media reports on the virus have been overblown.

"The story is much larger than the problem," he said.

Hoey said the disease first showed in Victoria about two years ago. He treats four to five dogs a year with the problem.

When you multiply that number by the 15 or 20 veterinarians in the area and add another 100 mild cases that aren't detected, it is fair to say there are probably a few hundred cases a year in this area, he added.

But there is no brush-fire epidemic that is going to devastate the dog population.

Older dogs have perhaps a 40 per cent greater chance of suffering from the virus but for others the risk is lowered to around four per cent, he said.

There is more risk for those dogs which are put in kennels or attend dog shows where there is greater exposure to other animals from different areas, Hoey said.

The owners of those animals would be wise to make use of a vaccine called Parovocine to protect their pets.

But for the average dog the risk is not that great and the virus can be treated.

CBC building sale soon

The CBC building in Victoria is expected to go up for sale later this summer, the corporation's property manager said today in an interview from Ottawa.

"I expect to get the papers together soon," said Bob Burns.

He said he is waiting for documents from CBC lawyers in Vancouver, and when they arrive he will start the tendering process. The CBC would advertise the building and propefty — estimated to be worth $2 million — locally and invite bids.

Burns said there had been some interest expressed by the provincial government in the brightly-painted empty structure at Blanshard and Kings, built two years ago as a television studio for a projected CBC station in Victoria.

"The province did show an interest but I don't know if they're very serious."

Others reported to be interested in the building include Victoria's CHEK television, CKVU of Vancouver and a non-profit local group, CFRE Public Broadcasting Society which is planning a commercial-free TV station.

"We hadn't heard that yet," said CFRE treasurer John Elliott when told of the CBC's plans to sell.

Chain crash on highway

Several vehicles were involved in a chain reaction pileup on Patricia Bay Highway near Swartz Bay shortly after 11 a.m. today.

Sidney RCMP detachment said there were unspecified injuries when six to nine vehicles crashed at the intersection of Patricia Bay Highway and McDonald Park Road.

Three ambulances and a fire truck were dispatched to the scene.

Restoration resumes soon

Work to restore the 117-year-old Temple Emanuel synagogue should resume in a week or two, Martin Levin, chairman of the restoration committee, said Tuesday.

Work stopped in May after stucco was stripped from the brick exterior for several reasons, mainly to allow a sub-contractor who will remove paint from brick to obtain a special chemical from eastern Canada.

Last parade for 'Rivets' after 37-year career

By AB KENT

Burnished badges flashed in a ripple of red serge as they brought the Horseman out for his last parade Tuesday.

Retired commissioner of the RCMP, Charles E. Rivett-Carnac, who was simply "Rivets" to fellow members of the force in a career lasting nearly 37 years, was taken to Royal Oak Cemetery escorted by a guard in full dress, friends, family, colleagues and dignitaries.

After cremation the ashes were to be taken to the police cemetery at Regina for burial with his peers and predecessors.

Rivett-Carnac for five years was commanding officer of the RCMP in British Columbia and returned to Victoria for his retirement 20 years ago. He died Friday in Royal Jubilee Hospital. He was 78.

Organization of the RCMP in this province, following years of law enforcement by a provincial police force, was one of Rivett-Carnac's major undertakings in a career that touched on war, adventure, intrigue, the glamor of films and the privations of life on Arctic patrol.

The romance of the Canadian northwest — and a family heavily involved in colonial policing — drew Rivett-Carnac to Canada with the intention of joining the force.

In 1923 he was accepted for the Mounties in Montreal, where the officer commanding Quebec district noted that he spoke French, Hindustani, Assamese and English and commented, "I would strongly recommend his engagement."

Less than a year after his entry, he volunteered for Arctic duty, was accepted and served two years in Mackenzie subdistrict, during which he became corporal.

Transfers and promotions came quickly.

Between 1924 and 1931, when he made sergeant, then inspector in the course of one month, Rivett-Carnac served in detachments at Norman, Fort Smith, Penticton, Mayo and Dawson.

With his commission Rivett-Carnac undertook the role of adjutant at training depot, Regina, April 1, 1931, and on Nov. 16, 1932 he was married to Mary Dillon Ware, of London, Ont.

The following July Rivett-Carnac was posted to command "G" division's Western Arctic sub-division, headquartered at Aklavik, where his first daughter Beverley Ann was born in 1933.

Two years later he was posted to Ottawa where he became intelligence officer for the whole force, and also edited the RCMP Quarterly. In 1939 he came west again, to take charge of Regina subdivision, during which in 1940 his second daughter Mary Frances was born.

Promotion to superintendent was given in 1942, followed by command of Winnipeg subdivision, then command of the intelligence section of criminal investigation back in Ottawa. Rivett-Carnac was given temporary charge of criminal investigation in 1945, the post in which for six months he directed the secret investigation of the Igor Gouzenko affair, the Russian cipher clerk who defected in Ottawa.

Rivett-Carnac remained head of the section until 1947, but was referred to as assistant director of criminal investigation. On Nov. 1 he was made officer commanding "F" division, Regina and a year later was made assistant commissioner in Saskatchewan.

He was named head of the force in B.C. on April 10, 1951, and devoted three years to the reorganization of the RCMP.

In 1956 he was promoted to deputy commissioner at Ottawa headquarters.

Within two years he would have retired with the maximum 35-year service limit, but for administrative reasons his term was extended. Meanwhile, political troubles in Newfoundland resulted in the protest resignation of commissioner Nicholson in March 1959, and Rivett-Carnac was brought back from retirement leave to take over the top post.

When the commissioner finally walked down the steps of the grey stone headquarters building for the last time he was "profoundly thankful I was still on my feet.

"It was the end of the pursuit that I'd started nearly 50 years previously. I was grateful to be alive and even more thankful for all that I'd learned," he wrote.

Dog owners whose pets have a high exposure to other dogs should have the animals vaccinated against an intestinal virus called canine parovirus, a Victoria veterinarian said today.

Dr. Alan Hoey of the Oak Bay Pet Clinic was commenting in an interview on a report from eastern Canada that there has been an increase in the number of dogs suffering from the disease in many Canadian centres.

The symptoms of the virus are severe vomiting and bloody diarrhea and, if untreated, it can be fatal.

But Hoey cautioned that to date media reports on the virus have been overblown.

"The story is much larger than the problem," he said.

Hoey said the disease first showed in Victoria about two years ago. He treats four to five dogs a year with the problem.

When you multiply that number by the 15 or 20 veterinarians in the area and add another 100 mild cases that aren't detected, it is fair to say there are probably a few hundred cases a year in this area, he added.

But there is no brush-fire epidemic that is going to devastate the dog population.

Older dogs have perhaps a 40 per cent greater chance of suffering from the virus but for others the risk is lowered to around four per cent, he said.

There is more risk for those dogs which are put in kennels or attend dog shows where there is greater exposure to other animals from different areas, Hoey said.

The owners of those animals would be wise to make use of a vaccine called Parovocine to protect their pets.

But for the average dog the risk is not that great and the virus can be treated.

CBC building sale soon

The CBC building in Victoria is expected to go up for sale later this summer, the corporation's property manager said today in an interview from Ottawa.

"I expect to get the papers together soon," said Bob Burns.

He said he is waiting for documents from CBC lawyers in Vancouver, and when they arrive he will start the tendering process. The CBC would advertise the building and property — estimated to be worth $2 million — locally and invite bids.

Burns said there had been some interest expressed by the provincial government in the brightly-painted empty structure at Blanshard and Kings, built two years ago as a television studio for a projected CBC station in Victoria.

"The province did show an interest but I don't know if they're very serious."

Others reported to be interested in the building include Victoria's CHEK television, CKVU of Vancouver and a non-profit local group, CFRE Public Broadcasting Society which is planning a commercial-free TV station.

"We hadn't heard that yet," said CFRE treasurer John Elliott when told of the CBC's plans to sell.

Chain crash on highway

Several vehicles were involved in a chain reaction pileup on Patricia Bay Highway near Swartz Bay shortly after 11 a.m. today.

Sidney RCMP detachment said there were unspecified injuries when six to nine vehicles crashed at the intersection of Patricia Bay Highway and McDonald Park Road.

Three ambulances and a fire truck were dispatched to the scene.

Restoration resumes soon

Work to restore the 117-year-old Temple Emanuel synagogue should resume in a week or two, Martin Levin, chairman of the restoration committee, said Tuesday.

Work stopped in May after stucco was stripped from the brick exterior for several reasons, mainly to allow a sub-contractor who will remove paint from brick to obtain a special chemical from eastern Canada.

Last parade for 'Rivets' after 37-year career

By AB KENT

Burnished badges flashed in a ripple of red serge as they brought the Horseman out for his last parade Tuesday.

Retired commissioner of the RCMP, Charles E. Rivett-Carnac, who was simply "Rivets" to fellow members of the force in a career lasting nearly 37 years, was taken to Royal Oak Cemetery escorted by a guard in full dress, friends, family, colleagues and dignitaries.

After cremation the ashes were to be taken to the police cemetery at Regina for burial with his peers and predecessors.

Rivett-Carnac for five years was commanding officer of the RCMP in British Columbia and returned to Victoria for his retirement 20 years ago. He died Friday in Royal Jubilee Hospital. He was 78.

Organization of the RCMP in this province, following years of law enforcement by a provincial police force, was one of Rivett-Carnac's major undertakings in a career that touched on war, adventure, intrigue, the glamor of films and the privations of life on Arctic patrol.

The romance of the Canadian northwest — and a family heavily involved in colonial policing — drew Rivett-Carnac to Canada with the intention of joining the force.

In 1923 he was accepted for the Mounties in Montreal, where the officer commanding Quebec district noted that he spoke French, Hindustani, Assamese and English and commented, "I would strongly recommend his engagement."

Less than a year after his entry, he volunteered for Arctic duty, was accepted and served two years in Mackenzie subdistrict, during which he became corporal.

Transfers and promotions came quickly.

Between 1924 and 1931, when he made sergeant, then inspector in the course of one month, Rivett-Carnac served in detachments at Norman, Fort Smith, Penticton, Mayo and Dawson.

With his commission Rivett-Carnac undertook the role of adjutant at training depot, Regina, April 1, 1931, and on Nov. 16, 1932 he was married to Mary Dillon Ware, of London, Ont.

The following July Rivett-Carnac was posted to command "G" division's Western Arctic sub-division, headquartered at Aklavik, where his first daughter Beverley Ann was born in 1933.

Two years later he was posted to Ottawa where he became intelligence officer for the whole force, and also edited the RCMP Quarterly. In 1939 he came west again, to take charge of Regina subdivision, during which in 1940 his second daughter Mary Frances was born.

Promotion to superintendent was given in 1942, followed by command of Winnipeg subdivision, then command of the intelligence section of criminal investigation back in Ottawa. Rivett-Carnac was given temporary charge of criminal investigation in 1945, the post in which for six months he directed the secret investigation of the Igor Gouzenko affair, the Russian cipher clerk who defected in Ottawa.

Rivett-Carnac remained head of the section until 1947, but was referred to as assistant director of criminal investigation. On Nov. 1 he was made officer commanding "F" division, Regina and a year later was made assistant commissioner in Saskatchewan.

He was named head of the force in B.C. on April 10, 1951, and devoted three years to the reorganization of the RCMP.

In 1956 he was promoted to deputy commissioner at Ottawa headquarters.

Within two years he would have retired with the maximum 35-year service limit, but for administrative reasons his term was extended. Meanwhile, political troubles in Newfoundland resulted in the protest resignation of commissioner Nicholson in March 1959, and Rivett-Carnac was brought back from retirement leave to take over the top post.

When the commissioner finally walked down the steps of the grey stone headquarters building for the last time he was "profoundly thankful I was still on my feet.

"It was the end of the pursuit that I'd started nearly 50 years previously. I was grateful to be alive and even more thankful for all that I'd learned," he wrote.
